Strawbridge-Parnova And Troupe Present Varied Program

Dancers Present Program of Classical and Modern Themes.

The Strawbridge-Parnova ensemble with a dance program consisting of fourteen dramatic sketches ranging from the pastoral and romantic to semi-religious and ultra-dramatic was presented Tuesday evening at the High School as the second number of the Artist Series.

With the aid of lovely costumes and modern lighting effects the artists gave full play to their unusual powers of pantomime. As exponents of the modern dance, which is extremely dynamic, every muscle and sinew in the body was brought into play under the perfect control and grace was the keynote of the flawless performance.

The program was divided into two parts, the first being the more realistic and tragic of the two; the second, the lighter and more amusing. Strawbridge, considered one of America's foremost male dancers, was superb in his solos. In "The Eagle," he leaps high into the air, and seems to float down instead of falling as is consistent with the laws of gravity. "The Little White Donkey" was an amusing bit of pantomime in which the dancer has his difficulties with an imaginary donkey.

Miss Parnova is the embodiment of all grace and charm. She captivated her audience with her interpretation of the classic and romantic ballet. It is difficult to designate any particular form of the dance in which Miss Parnova excelled. Although she is essentially a romanticist, she was

Y. W. C. A. Sponsors Womanless Wedding

On Saturday night, November 9, a womanless wedding, sponsored by the Y. W. C. A., was performed in the Rotunda. The bride, Dr. Reade, was attired in a black lace gown and wore a short white lace veil over his face. His bouquet was of assorted field flowers.

Dr. Durenberger, the groom, was supported during the ceremony by Dr. Punke, the best man. The bride's mother, Jake Gregory of Emory Junior, wept through the ceremony, which was performed by Dr. Sanders. The bridesmaids were attractively attired in rompers and evening gowns. Through the marriage performance, the flower girls sat behind the altar and smoked cigars, while playing poker.

The proceeds will be used to send a "Y" representative to Indianapolis.

New Books Reviewed By I. R. C. Members

The International Relations Club met at the club house Thursday evening at 8 o'clock for its regular monthly meeting.

The following book reviews were given: Schmeckehier—"International Organizations in Which the U. S. Participates", Angell—"Peace and the Plain Man," Ridell and others—"The Treaty of Versailles and After", Buell Chase Vaeur—"Democratic Governments in Europe", and Jessup—"International Security." Those giving the book reviews were Nettie Johnson, Martha Gay, Clara Davis Adams, Ethlyn Massey, Laura McLeod, Clara Louise Driskell.

After the program a delightful social hour was enjoyed.

Pine Branch Staff Plans Fall Issue

The staff of the 1935-36 Pine Branch, G. S. W. C.'s literary magazine, has started work on an issue that will be published before Christmas holidays. This magazine will contain the customary stories, poems, essays, sketches and book reviews, in addition to the columns of literary comment that it has contained in the past. The contents will be chosen from contributions made by any of the members of the student body.

For some time it was doubtful whether the publication budget would be able to provide for a Pine Branch in addition to the newspaper. The editor and committee worked together to finally decide that two issues could be published for this year. One will appear as a fall and one as a spring issue.

Since the committee has worked so consistently to have a Pine Branch, it is necessary that contributions be handed in before November 30, in order that the Christmas issue will be to date.

The prizes for the most outstanding contributions will be awarded by the English Club. These prizes will be given for the best poem, short story, and essay, in addition to prizes made for outstanding features.

As yet, it is not known what the prizes will be, but they will be awarded at a banquet to be given in the spring.

There have been few changes in the staff for this year, which includes the following girls: editor, Leonora Dufour; assistant editor, Ethlyn Massey; associate editors, Lorene Johnson, Hulda Summer, Ames Watkins, Antoinette Andrews, Bernice Andrews, and Carroll Peeples.

A number of town students attended the Thomasville-Valdosta football game in Thomasville Monday.

ANNOUNCEMENT

In accordance with the calendar, as set up in our current catalogue, no classes will be held on Thanksgiving Day, November 28. I am sorry to have to refuse the student petition asking for holidays from Wednesday afternoon, November 27, to Monday morning, December 2.

Frank R. Reade,
President.

Friday evening, November 29—Sophomore - Senior formal - Country Club.

More Interest Shown In Archery This Year

Girls Throng Back Campus for the Course.

More interest is being shown in archery this year than any previous year. Archery is an excellent sport for those who do not wish to go out for the more active sports.

Miss Ivey has a P. E. S. class in which she requires archery. She has between 25 and 30 girls in this class. Antoinette Andrews, as Miss Ivey's assistant, teaches 4 hours a week.

Lois Hafford, Lambda archery manager and Lorene Johnson, Kappa manager, teach 2 hours apiece each week. These managers have about 15 girls each day in their classes.

If out of fifteen ends an archer shoots a score of 200 she is awarded a bronze medal; a score of 300, a silver medal or a score of 400, a gold medal. The medals are awarded by the National Archery Association. Of the girls on the campus at present Lois Hafford and Paula Sapp have won their bronze medal and Lorene Johnson her silver medal.

The highest score which has been made on the campus was made by Estelle Roberts who shot 50 out of a possible 54 at 30 yards. As yet this record has not been broken.

The officials are pleased with the interest which is being shown, and with the new equipment coming in they feel that they will be able to teach as many girls as wish to come out.

Kappas and Lambdas Split Twin Bill At Thursday Game

Lambdas Win American Ball Game and Kappas Win in Fist Ball.

The Kappas and Lambdas split a twin bill yesterday afternoon on the athletic field, the Kappas winning the fist ball tilt and the Lambdas coming up in the American ball game.

The Red and White team clicked to a fine finish in the first game of the fist ball fight winning by an overwhelming margin of 15-8. The Lambdas took the second game 15-14. This was a thriller and the scores were close right to the end of the game, although the Lambdas were always in the lead. The Kappas came back to win the last toss-up easily with a score of 15-11. Both teams were in fine condition, with Morgan, Stanford, Perkins, and Coppage leading the Lambdas and Harrell, Olliff, Sapp, and Cauley heading the Kappas.

The Lambdas came back to redeem themselves in American ball by walking off with a score of four to nothing. The game was close, and though the Lambdas maintained an early lead they were not certain they'd keep it until the final whistle blew.

Studstill scored early in the first quarter with a kick from far out in the field. The ball was kept moving all over the field, neither team scoring again until the third quarter when Harrison dropped a neat one between the posts for the additional two points.

The game was marked by a fine show of good sportsmanship. None of the roughness of the first game (Continued on back page)

Biology Division Of Science Club Prepares Project

In the first meeting of the biology division of the Math-Science Club on Wednesday afternoon the members of the division began work on a project selected for this quarter, the modeling in colored clays of the various systems of the human body. Meetings are held once a week in the biology laboratory where all members work together.

The project will consist of one complete figure, each member making a separate system in one particular color which will be placed in correct position.

Dr. Phoebe Hall Knipling, instructor of biology, is the faculty advisor of the club and Elizabeth Green is student group leader. The members include Emma Ambos, Antoinette Andrews, Lois Hafford, Margaret Wade, Paula Sapp, Nelle Chism, and Margaret Berryhill.

CYNIC NAMES PATSY KELLY DUMB BUNNY

By PRISCILLA KELLEY

The MGM News Reel with its usual speed has released some scenes of the recent Florida hurricane in full fury. These shots were photographed in Miami. These scenes will be shown at the Ritz today in addition to "Page Miss Glory" which has in its cast Marion Davies, Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien and that dumb-bunny, Patsy Kelly.

On Saturday lovely Margaret Lindsay will appear in "Personal Maid's Secret," a light story and one far below Miss Lindsay's ability.

On Monday and Tuesday an all star cast will present "The Last Days of Pompeii," showing the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius with all bedlam busted loose. An additional feature will be Major Bowes' Amateur Theatre of the Air and News.

The people who still have hope of winning the money will get a break this week even if they don't win any money, for the picture to be shown Wednesday will be "I Found Stella Parrish" with Kay Francis, who has been referred to as a clothes-horse, but who cares? We like clothes-horses.

Ruth Williams spent the week-end visiting her family in Waycross.

IN REGARD TO THE HONOR STUDENTS

(EDITORIAL)

By LORENE JOHNSON

"That girl is an honor student."

What do those words mean to you and to the other people on our campus? We call it the Dean's List but then fifty per cent of the student body cannot tell you what it is, how it can be attained, or the advantages thereof once one does make it.

Where the name, Dean's List, originated or its connection with scholastic standing is a little vague. Various colleges have their own name for those students ranking in the upper fifteen per cent of the class, ranging anywhere from Honor Commission to Student Honor Roll. But surely no other school so completely ignores its honor students as G. S. W. C.

Some of our Georgia colleges have a special section set aside at class meetings, assembly, and chapel where the honor students sit together, or even wear caps and gowns. Other schools make it possible for their students to become members of national honorary scholastic fraternities. Yet on a small campus as ours we do not even know who the honor students are.

The primary objective of a college student is to learn; to realize some scholastic accomplishments. Students come to Valdosta, work hard and conscientiously, succeed in their objective. Then the very college for which they have worked fails to recognize their success.

Our athletic clubs are very particular to see that each active member has his awards. Pupils outstanding in music, dramatics, art, and literary achievements are very carefully called to the attention of the student body during the year. On the other hand scholastic achievements are too often obscured by an attractive personality, faithfulness and neatness, and conformity to routine—all because a person does not capitalize his personality. Because he does not cover scholastic deficiency with what advertisers call "good copy." Personality is doubtless a great thing, but don't be a publicity sucker. Know your campus. Better still, know the people on your campus and what they stand for.

Who are the honor students on our campus?

EXPULSED FROM COLUMBIA, REED HARRIS CONTINUES IN PUBLICATIONS FIELD

By ARNOLD SERWER

(Assoc. Collég. Press Correspondent)
Washington, D. C.—Every time two or more editors of college papers get together for a discussion, if the session lasts long enough, one of them is bound to bring up the name of Reed Harris.

"What," one of them eventually asks, "ever became of that fella Reed Harris, who raised such fuss when he edited The Columbia Spectator?"

The answer is that he came to Washington in due time and today, after several promotions, is Assistant Director of Federal Writers' Projects, under Director Henry G. Alsberg. The Federal Writers' Projects is that part of the works relief program designed to extend aid to ex-newspapermen and writers on relief by creating useful projects suitable to their talents. At the present time Harris is helping to get the largest writing project, the American Guide, an improved type of Baedeker for this country, under way in all 48 states.

The versatile Mr. Harris is also serving in the capacity of executive editor of a section of the WPA called Reports and Bulletins. This section gather information on the status of the program by means of reports sent in from every state. These reports, narrative more than statistical in type, are a source of information for both the administration and the press.

The former editor of The Spectator left Columbia in 1932, it may be recalled, as president of Phi Gamma Delta and author of "King Football," and in the opinion of President Nicholas Murray Butler was Public Enemy Number One to Ten inclusive. Harris spent the next two years at four different jobs, sort of accumulating the first four cheques of what may yet turn out to be an interestingly chequered career.

The first two jobs were on The New York Times and The New York Journal. Harris did general reporting and news of the colleges and universities. He was one of a dozen men fired from the Journal at one fell swoop, in one of those mass firings that give life on a Hearst sheet its piquancy. He is still proud of the fact though that whereas the others separated from the Journal on this occasion were given only two weeks salary as a parting gift, he was given three weeks salary. He doesn't know quite why this was done, but he likes to think that it was some special mark of distinction, not just an error on the part of the business office.

Next he worked as an editor for a small publishing house in New York. A fairly brief spell of that, and then he became production manager of a fair sized advertising agency. It was from this job that Henry Alsberg rescued him, to bring him to Washington as assistant editor of "The Project," the now defunct publication of what was then the Works Division of the FERA.

That was a year ago this month. In the past year he has made considerable progress, moving up three grades in government service. He is knee deep in plans and details with his chief, for putting 6,000 writers, cartographer, editors, and scientists of various kinds to work on the American Guide, for getting other projects outlined that will follow the Guide, and is at the same time keeping an eye on the reporting system of

MASSEY FEARS GARRET IF SHE CONTINUES WRITING POETRY

By ROSALIND LANE

Our nomination for G. S. W. C. fairytale book girl . . . Ethlyn Massey. She's a grand combination of attractiveness and efficiency . . . It seems that the gods were smiling . . . She's a very charming person and a stimulating journalist.

Ethlyn began writing at Shorter College in her freshman year . . . Was a reporter on the college paper . . . Won the prize that year for the best short story by an undergraduate . . . Came to G. S. W. C. in '33 . . . Has since been assistant editor of the Pine Branch, winner in '35 of a silver loving cup for best short story, and editor-in-chief of 1935-36 Pine Cone . . . As representative of the Pine Cone, was recently a delegate with Leonora Dufour to the Collegiate Press Convention in Chicago . . . Knowledge of her ability is not limited to our campus—had a poem "Poem Without Meaning" published in Versecraft last year.

Ethlyn is very unassuming . . . Declares that she isn't a writer but would like to learn . . . Polishes off rough edges by reading and finding new ways of expressing old facts . . . Has a little book in which she jots down striking descriptions or unusually interesting passages . . . Likes to write poetry but gets more recognition for prose.

Her trip to Chicago was her first visit in the North . . . Likes the people and their courtesy . . . Says they laughed at her southern accent and said to her "You're from Gaw-ja" . . . She likes to travel and see strange places.

Ethlyn has hazel eyes, brown hair, and a trim figure . . . Possesses a rare sense of color and is always smartly dressed . . . Is fascinating and gracious . . . Speaks in well-modulated tones but jokes about the time she tried to take voice and couldn't carry a tune . . . Majors in history and is a member of the I. R. C. . . . Is subject to moods . . . Is walking on clouds one moment and beneath the earth the next . . . Likes Galsworthy . . . Dreads awkward moments . . . Has a gift of forgetting people's names when about to introduce them . . . Finds delight in harmonious blendings of colors in make-up and clothes.

She's cursed with liking every known fattening food . . . Has a secret desire to write but is afraid she'll starve in a garret . . . Thinks she'd better stick to something that will bring home the sauces and gravies—She's not fond of eating!

Charles Darwin spent eight years dissecting over 10,000 barnacles. He became interested in the structure of one species, and because of erroneous knowledge and lack of information proceeded to do this great work.

PERSONAL MENTION

CONDEMNED PRISONER FINDS HAVEN ON ISLAND

Malaparte, "On the Island of Lipari," YALE REVIEW of 1935.

All who like classical literature and especially the Odyssey should read this story of the modern Ulysses. The author, released from prison, was condemned to spend five years of exile on the Island of Lipari in the Mediterranean (the largest of the Aeolian Islands) over which Aeolus, god of the winds, is said to have reigned. Malaparte determined to look on his exile as a romantic adventure, and indeed it was romantic to be able to compare himself with Ulysses and visit the same places and see the same scenes that the wandering Greek saw. The setting of Lipari is very picturesque, and the customs there are unequalled by any in the world in quaintness. It is a land of fishermen and fruit-growers, and of lovely dusky maidens. The tropical landscape, in view of the mountains of Sicily, made this author's five year exile seem as but a few days—in a land he was reluctant to leave.

Rearrangement of the shelving in the magazine reading room of the Library has made the task of finding periodicals much simpler.

The current issues of the magazines are found on shelves which are placed with a very narrow space between them. The older issues are located on widely spaced boards in a direct line beneath the newer numbers.

Another aid is the marker tacked by each magazine. Several new publications have been subscribed for recently.

Expelled Student Still Journalist

the Reports and Bulletins section. Harris often thinks back over the events of his undergraduate days, when he had one to half a dozen campaigns going at once, was anathema to the football team and its supporters, was the favorite bogle man of the alumni, and was the subject for great deal of curious speculation among college editors.

One of his favorite off-hour interests is still this business of undergraduate journalism. He likes to hear about the crusades of the college sheets from time to time, of disputes between editors and outside busybodies. And of course, most of all he likes to read from time to time about what was once his own baby, The Columbia Spectator, and about whatever powers the "Spec" may happen to be making unhappy at the moment.
