Yule Carol: 'Round Mountains, through Valleys by Hestia

'Round Mountains, Through Valleys, Glistening softly in sparkling snow,
Across shimmering cornfields, howling and shrieking, the winter winds blow.
The deer in the holler have gone to find places the wind doesn't know.

Above twinkle bright stars, lighting the night as they peek through the haze Of snowclouds that cover the bright winter moon with a halo-like glaze:
The Goddess's lantern, lighting the nights of the short winter days,

A Beacon of Blessing for her children, who, thinking of spring flowers and fern,
For long summer daylight, green on the trees and the mountains they yearn.
Through the Great Mother, the Child of Promise, the Sun shall return

'Round mountains, through valleys, sparkling brightly with melting snow....
