Special program underway

Persons with sincere interests in handicapped given plea

Persons in Hahira who have a sincere interest in working with handicapped children or adults and who have had training in music, arts and crafts, dramatics, dancing, or any other physical activity, just might have a chance to turn that interest into reality.

Volunteer workers are needed now in this area under a program headed by Miss Wylene Spradley, recently employed by the City of Valdosta as Community Therapeutic Recreation Specialist.

Although a Day Camp Center and recreation program for the mentally or physically handicapped is still in the planning stages for this community, officials are hopeful that the recreation program will begin during the early part of the summer and the Day Camp Center is scheduled to start later in the summer months.

Operating on a matching funds basis where local sources pay 30 per cent of the cost and Federal funds are provided for the larger 70 per cent, the Day Camp Center will be open to any person in the county who is mentally or physically handicapped. It will be maintained on a year-round program. The Federal grant is from the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation.

Officially selected to begin preparations for the program is the county school system, and Walter W. Harrison, principal of the Hahira Elementary School, is making the contacts for this area. Persons having a need for this facility will be referred to Miss Spradley for the special training.

For the moment, though, funds and volunteer workers are being sought for the project, and organizations and individuals are urged to make donations or to help raise funds for the program. Officials stress that no matter how small or large a donation, the money will be greatly appreciated and put to good use.

Volunteers who have trained skills in physical education or special education, camp counselors, people interested in scouting and other physical alertness programs are urged to volunteer their services for the project.

As head of the program, Miss Spradley who is a native of Tifton, attended Georgia College in Milledgeville and Georgia State University in Atlanta where she was among the first class of physical therapists graduated in Georgia.

Until her employment by the City of Valdosta, she was staff

About your Social Security

Medicare patients going to the hospital after 1972 will have to pay more before Medicare begins to cover the bill. The "deductible" rose from the present $68 to $72 a Medicare patient must pay for a hospital stay. The doctor bill part will continue the present premium of $5.80 monthly through June 30, 1973. However, the patient will bear the first $60 of total doctor bills each year before Medicare begins to apply. The deductible in 1972 was $50.

Perhaps the most dramatic change in the Medicare provisions is the extension of Medicare protection to those who by next July first have been drawing disability benefits for as much as 24 months. Beginning on that date, as soon as a disabled claimant has been on the benefit rolls as much as 24 full months, he or she will be qualified for both parts of Medicare, regardless of age. Until then only those 65 and over may qualify.

The hospital coverage under Medicare -- unlike the doctor bill part -- requires a certain number of Social Security work credits. Either the applicant must have these credits, or be the spouse or dependent parent of someone who does. Beginning 1-1-73 even those with no work credits may qualify under this new law.

Under this provision, anyone at age 65 without work credits, and not the spouse or dependent parent of someone who does have such credits, may enroll for the hospital part, paying a premium of $33 a month. Such enrollee will also be required to enroll for the doctor bill part which carries a premium at present of $5.80 a month. Both of these premiums undoubtedly will rise in the future as medical costs rise.

Another big change in the Medicare provisions eliminates a time requirement for enrollment. Through 1972 the law read that those who wait beyond three "open seasons" after their 65th birthday are permanently left out of Medicare's doctor bill protection. "Open season" is the first three months of each new year. Beginning in 1973 this prohibition is eliminated. No matter how long ago a person reached age 64 and failed to enroll, they may enroll during any "open season". Late enrollment does carry a penalty which is added to the premium. This penalty is, 10 per cent above the current premium for each 12 months since the time the person could have enrolled for the doctor bill protection. There is no time limit on enrolling for the hospital part of Medicare.

The new law provides that home health service which is

Touring Choir presents program

The Fisherman's Union, a 45-member youth choir from Nyack, New York, will present a program at Hahira United Methodist Church on April 24, at 7:30 p.m.

The choir was formed several years ago by a group of concerned high school students who were eager to share their faith with those around them.

Their evening program consists of religious music, including traditional and contemporary numbers, sung by the entire choir, by a folk group accompanied by guitars, and by a male quartet. Synchronized with the singing is a multi-media presentation prepared by the group which relates every day living to their commitment to Christ. Elegantly dressed in long, powder blue gowns and in contrasting mauve suits, the group is professionally lighted as it sings. With its conductor, Herb Crouch, and pianist, Charles Carter, the Choralists have received wide-spread acclaim for their high grade performances.

Under the leadership of Marilyn and Joe Constance, advisors for the Fisherman's Union, the choir has performed in many churches in New York State, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Vermont, and has recorded two popular stereo records of contemporary traditional music. Their Spring choir tour will again take them through the coastal states to Miami, Florida.

SOYBEANS STRONG

Georgia soybean planting is forecast to be approximately 800,000 acres in 1973. This is over a 10 percent increase from last year. At present, the demand for soybeans is expected to remain strong throughout 1973 because of increased exports.

Miss Mott, Mr. Lindsey united in marriage at Bethany Baptist Church

One of the lovely events of the early Spring season was the marriage of Miss Vicki Diane Mott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lewis Mott of Pompano Beach, Florida, and Mathew Robert Lindsey, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Robert Lindsey of Hahira. The marriage was solemnized on Sunday afternoon, April 8, at 3:30 o'clock at Bethany Baptist Church by the Rev. A. V. Pickern, pastor of New Bethel Baptist Church.

Hahira Methodist women hold meeting

The Hahira United Methodist Women had their study on missions April 16 at the home of Mrs. C. W. McMillan.

Mrs. Edwin Shiver presided over the meeting.

Mrs. Nannie Mae Hicks, who was in charge of the program, used the program in the regular program booklet, "Live A New Life." The program was entitled "Tennebrae Service."

Mrs. Shiver read scripture from Luke 22: 1 - 24.

Mrs. Howard Freeman, a visitor at the meeting, was narrator for the program. She described the disciples of Christ as coming from various walks of life. She gave a brief discription of each disciple - and a candle was lit for each disciple as he was described.

The events of that Maundy Thursday began with fellowship in the upper room and ended in tragic desertion. What of our light in the world's darkness? Mrs. Hicks closed the program with prayer.

Mrs. McMillan, assisted by Mrs. Perry Fields and Mrs. Freeman served refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Stalvey celebrate 50th year of marriage

Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Stalvey celebrated their 50th year of marriage on Sunday, April 6th at the Salem Methodist Church where they met four years before they married in 1923.

Mrs. Stalvey, the former Fannie Mae Rountree, stated she has lived her entire life in the Salem Community. Although being eighteen months the older, Mrs. Stalvey related "I have never been the boss."

Their wedding was performed in Valdosta, Ga. in front of the Rev. John Harris home while sitting in the car. The wedding party consisted of Irvin Roberts, Eula B. Hiers, Louise Rountree and Bryant Stalvey. Rev. Harris was a Primitive Baptist minister, although the Stalveys are of Methodist faith.

Mr. Stalvey's parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Stalvey. Mrs. Stalvey's parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Lee Rountree. All were from the Salem Community.

(Boog) and Edna Mae Williams, all of Hahira, Cristell Browning of Valdosta, Christine McCleod of Dixie and Eugene Stalvey of Waycross. The couple has 17 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The Social Hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The center of attraction was the long spacious table, overlaid with a gold cutwork cloth, which held a gold and crystal compote filled with yellow glads, daisies, carnations and chrysanthemums. On either end was a beautiful three-tier cake embossed in gold bearing the traditional bride and groom under an arch of the number 50, while the other end held the punch bowl also embedded in greenery and yellow mums. Nuts and mints were also served.

The cake was served by Mrs. Debbie Wade of Alma, Ga. Joan Williams, and Mary Jo Browning of Valdosta presided over the punch bowl. Kay Noles of Hahira kept the registry. They are all granddaughters of the couple.

The receiving line consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Stalvey and their seven children.

Last Saturday was an unusual day for the Shiloh's. We were invited to go to Thomasville to tape some songs for the Farm Report that comes on the air at 6 a.m. every week day. We got there early enough to get familiar with the equipment and not be so nervous. It helped some, that and the fact that we had a little talk with the Master before we went. We found some more nice people, in Thomasville. They work with you to the best of your ability. They're nice people to be around. Thank you, WCTV for giving us the privilege to be on this program. I would like to apologize to the ones that have gotten up at six o'clock every morning so far this week with the intent of hearing us. (I've also been up this early). We were informed we would be on this week but so far we haven't. Guess we will have to continue the early rising! Makes us feel fresh and ready to go until about noon, anyway!

The Countrymen were also there for taping Saturday. They're a fine group from Jasper, Florida. Dewey Adams, the manager of the group, told us they had been doing a lot of singing in Alabama. Mr. Adams, Dewey's father is still with the group singing bass. When they were with us at Pineview, Mr. Adams had had open heart surgery and was still weak. But he's in good voice now and singing full-time with the group. It was good seeing them again.

We would like to express our gratitude to the Broadwells, Anne and Clifford, for playing the bass guitar and the piano for us Saturday. It made our singing go a lot easier. Hope Tanya is feeling lots better now, also. God be with you.

The Homecoming at Freewill Church in Hahira Sunday was a big, enjoyable day, for all attending. The Revival is now in progress with Brother Bronzo Parrish. Faye said the Lord is blessing and a big crowd was there Monday night. The services begin each evening at 8 p.m.

We're sorry to hear Brother A. J. Boutwell was ill and unable to attend the scheduled sing in Bainbridge, Ga., last week, but hear he is much better now. Hope you continue to stay well.

The Revelations are scheduled to be in Pouland, Georgia at the church of God of Prophecy this Saturday night for a sing there, 8 p.m.

Pineview Baptist starts revival this Sunday and lasts through Friday night, Brother Julian Maddox will be bringing the messages. The young people of the church are to sing for us one night, the Shiloh's, and hopefully The "Joyful Sounds" will be with us one night. Services start at 8 o'clock each evening. You have a special invitation to be with us during revival.

The Church of God in Hahira is in revival this week with Sister Grace Day bringing the messages. Peggy and Lester of the Shiloh's are members here and they tell of the wonderful things that are taking place. The young people are turning out in good number for this revival. The Day family sings better than ever, if that is possible, and they're just having a wonderful time. The revival will last through next Sunday, which will be Easter. There will be special singing with the Shiloh's and hopefully the "Joyful Sounds". Services start each evening at 7:30 p.m.

We had a good crowd for our sing last Saturday night at Pineview. Enjoyed hearing the "Joyful Sounds".

The Shiloh's will be at The Full Gospel Church in Valdosta Saturday night in a sing there. It gets underway at 8 o'clock.

Go out and support Gospel Music somewhere this week and be in the church of your choice Sunday!

Left to Right: Don Bass, Peggy Bellflowers, Louella Bass and Lester Bellflowers. Seated is Judy Gunnells, pianist, who moved to Savannah and is no longer with the group.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hutto have returned from Miami, Fla., and had an enjoyable trip. They went to Live Oak, Fla., Sunday to see Mrs. Roy Kellogg's trailer at the Suwanee River and all you can see is the top of the trailer. Everyone in the camp has had to move out. Mrs. Kellogg is staying with her relatives until she decides what to do. Mrs. Kellogg is known to some as Orrell Marshall.

Mr. and Mrs. Manson Woody and John and Mary were Friday night supper guests of our family. My girls prepared supper as I was in the field all day. I'm not bragging, but they can prepare a good meal when they have to. Sometimes we mothers forget that this is something they must learn. We do not always like the mess they make, but remember this is their job, also, to clean up afterwards.

The Pineview Baptist Youth Group had a picnic Sunday afternoon at Reed Bingham Park. Those who were along to partake of all the fun were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bass, Kenny, Stevie, Tammy and Timmy, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Cowart, Ronnie Carter, Becky Carter, Sandra Bounds, Robyn Mikell, Francis Mikell, Calvin Williams, Willie Williams, Sandra Vickers, Janet Vickers, Bro. James Monroe and Mrs. Monroe, and Mary Monroe. They all carried a lunch and had a game of softball. All had a good time, but were "pooped".

The church is holding a revival beginning Easter Sunday through Friday night, April 27. Services begin at 8:00 p.m. with Rev. Julian Maddox as guest minister.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Parker and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mathis went to Valdosta to eat last Friday night in honor of Mrs. Mathis' birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Harris have been visiting again and I think it is so wonderful to know people who have time for people this way. It is almost a thing of the past because of our busy, busy world. They spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buckles of Valdosta; and on their way home they stopped with Bro. and Sister Earnest Bennett of Valdosta. Bro. Bennett is getting along about the same. Monday they visited Mr. and Mrs. Joe Griner of Nashville, Ga., and while there they visited Mrs. Ida Bennett and daughter.

Mrs. Ferman Staten was weekend guest of the Bobby Vicker's and Mr. Staten joined them on Sunday. Miss Rhonda Vickers missed school on Monday and Tuesday because of an infected throat. She is better, thanks to our miracle drugs.

For those of you who missed our column last week, the Shiloh Homemakers Club needs more 16-inch squares for our quilt. Also bring a sixteen-inch square of a pattern that you know will be different from anyone else's. Cut the square 4 1/2 inches to allow for the seam. Miss Ted Phelps is to be with us next month.

Opinion

On this page are varied opinions this newspaper thinks worthy of reader consideration - they should not be construed as editorial stands by the PUBLISHERS unless specifically noted.

Risen indeed

We recall the Cross on which our Saviour died. The palace guards saw through the gray murk that something seemed different about the tomb. They walked and stood amazed at the sight of the broken seal on the stone. We feel the shock they experienced.

The guards were the first witnesses of the power of His resurrection. Peter and John ran breathless and looked with wonder into an empty tomb. It took the resurrection to instill a heartbeat into the embryo church and bring it to life. "He is not here, for He has risen!"

We join the theorist for a moment and look at the Cross from a vantage point. We see a mob of soldiers and onlookers gathered howling for blood. We see three dead men nailed to crosses, the carrion birds begin to circle, the hounds skulking in the background wait for the darkness.

Christ, the noblest soul in the world, has been left to die alone. We can only see the crosses. We remember, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ. We are of all men most miserable."

But now is Christ risen. Not a fancy, but a fact. God released Him back to life again, for death could not keep the man within its grip. Death had no claim on Him. Thus when He covered our sins on Calvary, He also covered our death, our mortality.

The reality of Easter is founded upon the reality of the cross. Some may state that Easter is not a miracle, but Easter points back to the Cross, where we ourselves are crucified with Jesus Christ to the world. We become spiritually dead in order that He might live in us as King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

Yes, Christ is risen, He has risen indeed! Praise Ye the Lord!

Flouride Water Bill signed by Governor

Gov. Jimmy Carter recently signed into law a measure which brings fluoridated water to incorporated communities throughout the state. The bill was signed during opening day ceremonies in the recent dental meetings held in Atlanta and attended by more than 1,000 dentists and dental workers.

Dentists of Georgia have worked toward the fluoridation program for more than four years through an education campaign of the GDA legislative committee. The President of GDA called the passage of the bill a "milestone for dental health in Georgia."

Dentists praised the governor and the state for "prudence and foresight in seeking to obtain the benefits" of fluoridated water. The bill requires the fluoridation of public water supplies in all Georgia municipalities as soon as state funds for the purpose is available. An appropriation of $400,000 in the budget takes effect July 1 to help cities purchase fluoridation equipment and buy six months worth of chemicals.

Cities can exempt themselves by 10 per cent of their registered voters calling for a referendum that rejects fluoridation. Georgia has become the eighth state to have mandatory water fluoridation.

It is believed that soon a program of national health insurance will face the dentistry profession. The plan is inevitable, but so far all federal bills pertaining to the subject of medical care have disregarded the dentistry program.

It is known that nearly every one of our 200 million population needs dental care; with only 40 per cent of them receiving any at all. The available dental care for everyone through a system of national health insurance presents a staggering challenge to us all. Our children and many older ones need this care which they can't provide for themselves. Good teeth means so much for good health and "happy living".

The Perfect Marriage For The Old Bride's Maid

ST. JOHN'S JOURNAL

Class values rule new politics

By JEFFREY ST. JOHN
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — "By 1969 the most serious rupture in the nation," writes White House adviser Patrick J. Buchanan in his just published work, "The New Majority," "was not between Republicans and Democrats, but between the lower- and middle-class Democratic center and right, and its upper middle-class elite and left. ..."

Buchanan, in effect, contends that American politics has undergone a profound change, one which has barely been perceived by the public and most politicians alike. It is a change from bread-and-butter economic issues to one involving class values. In the aftermath of the November, 1972, Nixon landslide, this columnist wrote that Sen. George McGovern's crushing defeat was largely the result of a "class vote" that involved cultural more than political values.

Buchanan confirms that the Nixon campaign strategy for victory, which was, in Buchanan's words, "years not weeks in the making," was indeed one that was fashioned along cultural lines.

"While the Nixon landslide," he writes in his book, "was a victory of the man over McGovern, it was also a victory of 'The New American Majority' over 'The New Politics,' a victory of traditional American values over the claims of the 'Counter Culture,' a victory of 'Middle America' over the celebrants of Woodstock nation."

Buchanan believes, moreover, that this new and powerful political reality "makes the long-predicted 'realignment of parties' a possibility, and could make Mr. Nixon the Republican FDR." Here in the bastion of eastern liberalism, New York, we can see the validity of this view by what has been happening in the mad political scramble in the current New York City mayoralty campaign.

GOP liberal governor of New York, Nelson Rockefeller, has come out and endorsed former Democratic Mayor Robert Wagner to run as a GOP candidate on the Republican ticket. The long-time Democratic-oriented New York Liberal Party has given its blessing to this curious coalition of liberals. In the meantime, the traditional Democratic Party seems fated to accept former policeman Mario Biaggio with the New York Conservative Party endorsement.

The liberals of all parties here have perceived the injection of cultural-class issues in politics and are seeking to form some counter response, lest the liberal stranglehold on politics here be broken by a coalition of conservative Republicans and Democrats.

Just how President Nixon is seeking to further a realignment of the major political parties can be glimpsed by his promotion of former Texas Democratic Gov. John Connally, who spearheaded the "Democrats for Nixon" campaign in 1972.

Not only did the President include Connally in his Cabinet, but he continues to promote the former protege of the Texas Populist, Lyndon Johnson, as a possible GOP presidential contender in 1976. It is rumored that before summer Connally will switch to the GOP (as John Lindsay of New York switched from the GOP to the Democrats), and be spending considerable time and effort courting eastern business and academic groups.

Connally, like Mr. Nixon, is an upholder of traditional values. The President believes that the keystone to his 1973 landslide victory over McGovern was a solid exposition of social as opposed to political conservatism. Meaning, among other things, no amnesty for draft evaders, pro-capital punishment, and anti-abortion stands. Apparently the President believes someone like Connally can carry the GOP through another tenure in the White House after 1976 because of his success in the 1972 campaign in encouraging the defection of millions of Democrats to the GOP.

'Hm-nothing seems to make it much better.'

Publisher Speaks

By Grover C. Patten

Reports from the County Commissioner's Convention in Savannah indicate that Lester Maddox and George L. Smith took the spotlight. Some think Lester got what was coming to him when he got a public scolding from House Speaker George L. Smith for his conduct as presiding officer of the Senate. Maddox had denounced the House for its action in tax reform and other activities. When Maddox had finished, Smith asked to speak. Then is when he lit into the man who had tried to shift the burden of responsibility off his own shoulders.

Speaker Smith went on to ask some interesting questions which surely made Maddox squirm in his seat. Who was holding up House Bill One (the tax reform bill)? Answer, the Senate. Where did the salary bill come from? Answer, the Senate. Who in 1967 had his administration spokesman stand up and offer a bill raising the governor's salary from $17,500 to $45,000? The answer to that was Maddox also. So it appears now that Georgia politics are already taking shape and next year will be a most interesting one.

A CHANGING WORLD Agnew bucks tough odds

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Editor, Copley News Service

The odds are against Vice President Spiro T. Agnew ever becoming president. Aside from the matter of capability, which seldom has had much to do with selection of a candidate for our highest office, this is rather too bad.

But, it is a truth historically, politically, personally and perhaps practically — all despite Agnew's unswerving loyalty (so far) to Richard Nixon and to the Republican Party. It is an even more bitter pill for him to swallow considering that the apparent favorite among the White House would-be kingmakers is the likely political turncoat, Democrat John Connally of Texas.

The odds that Agnew must overcome include these:

1. History. Not since 1836, in the election of Martin Van Buren, has a vice president moved from that office by election directly into the presidency.

The most recent of those to fail were Hubert Humphrey and Mr. Nixon. Actually, only two vice presidents other than Van Buren were able to turn the trick, the others being John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. The election machinery was different in Adams' and Jefferson's time and it was much easier for a vice president to make this final successful move to the nation's highest office.

2. Political. For a vice president to succeed in election to the presidency he must have the full support of the outgoing president. Humphrey got very little help from retiring President Lyndon B. Johnson — and lost. The Nixon people often have blamed the lukewarm support of outgoing President Dwight Eisenhower for their man's defeat at the hands of young John F. Kennedy. Now, reports are frequent that Agnew is on the White House "gray," if not the black list.

Mr. Nixon has not been linked directly to anti-Agnew activity but, just as in the "Watergate caper," some of his top aides are reported to be behaving with the same hostility to Agnew as to others in government who have displeased them. There even is a wild group called "Citizens for Nixon '76" which is planning a campaign to nullify the 22nd Amendment limiting a president to two terms. This move will get nowhere and the White House says nobody there "knows a damn thing about that group." But, it does show that many factors are combining to deny Agnew what he and the more conservative Republicans think he richly deserves — the presidency.

3. Personal. Agnew comes out in small group semi-private discussions much better than he does in his public speeches denouncing certain newsmen, newspapers, Vietnam deserters and others who plague the administration.

I had the enlightening opportunity to spend every day of 14 consecutive days with the vice president and, regardless of differences regarding his tone of rhetoric, harshness of language and lack of verbal restraint, he came through as a man of much more intellectual depth than is apparent in his public utterances. Thus, his public image is not his greatest asset. Neither does his choice of Frank Sinatra as a close personal friend do him any good. Sinatra does not set well with the heart of Agnew's constituency — the great Republican Midwest. However, the vice president, in an approach typical of many of his actions, talks tough: "I'm not about to let any rumors interfere with my right to select my own friends. ... This is simply what you might call peripheral gossip that comes out of the lower echelons of the White House staff, who really are not informed on what is going on." Courageous words, yes, but is Agnew burning bridges of ambition behind him?

4. Practical. With Mr. Nixon thinking so highly of Connally (the President once said Connally was capable of filling any job in the world — despite the Texan's launching of the dollar crisis while secretary of the Treasury), Agnew's confrontation with a historical "no-no" and the worry his great base of conservative support over links to Sinatra are the doors to a GOP candidacy closed to the vice president? The liberal wing of the party would be cool to him best, Connally is being sulted on some sub-cabinet appointments that advance his stock as a Democrat considered likely to turn Republican and Agnew's best supporters are dismayed.

EDUCATION Teachers differ on funding

By KENNETH J. RABIN
Copley News Service

Schoolmen are no clearer or positive about how to solve education's problems than pupils, students, parents and other taxpayers.

This is particularly evident from the opinions of more than a thousand members of Phi Delta Kappa, the national honorary education fraternity, on financing schools making best use of the money. Their views are reported in the fraternity's March magazine.

One of education's most critical questions is how and how to get the money to pay the continually increasing costs of schooling. The government level — federal, state or local — providing the money will exercise the most control over curriculum, personnel, administration, construction and more. More politicians at all levels are admitting it.

Also involved is the amount of school you will pay and to whom: el of government; the and salaries of million people and the future of lective bargaining betw school boards, teachers administrators.

In the poll, 79 per cent agreed that if the state provides all the cash for schools, "more program control will likewise move local boards ... to state agencies."

Fifty-four per cent opposed single state agency to determine needs, prepare budgets and allocate appropriations for kindergarten through college. At the same time, 42 per cent said the largest share of money should come from the state and 60 per cent favored raising funds via a flat graduated income tax, rather than property taxes.

Another double standard disclosed by questions about measuring school effectiveness. Fifty-two per cent said "There is a significant positive correlation between per capita expenditure, school funds and pupil achievement," but 66 per cent disagreed that "per pupil expenditures are a valid index for making comparisons of school district effectiveness." Research fails to show a substantial, significant relationship between the amount of money spent on a pupil's schooling and the amount of knowledge in his head.

Here are other opinions from the poll representing views of nearly 98,000 active fraternity members.

Slightly more than half agreed that local school boards should limit expenditures to the revenue available, even though it may restrict programs and limit employee benefits and 60 per cent said the current emphasis on categorical federal funding "constitutes undesirable federal control of local schools." (Education revenue sharing opponents take note.)

Sixty-seven per cent opposed public support of parochial schools; 71 per cent wanted more federal funds; 54 per cent believe "class size is a major factor" in school achievement, despite substantial research to the contrary.

Sixty-three per cent support competition for financial support between higher education

Thought For Food

In an age when power counts, nutritionally-conscious consumers are beginning to turn to those protein foods that can give them the needed nutrients for fast-paced modern day living. Peanuts are loaded with protein power.

Peanuts have been called "Nature's Masterpiece of Food Values" and no wonder. Besides carrying 26 protein grams, peanuts contain many of the essential B vitamins (Thiamin, Riboflavin, Niacin), fats - the polyunsaturated kind - and carry a balanced share of calories. The balance is an important thing to remember. Calories properly balanced with energy-giving proteins are not only good for you, they are essential. Those who worry about their weight should not fret about eating peanuts because they create quick energy. This abundant energy burns up the calories and builds muscle. Appreciable amounts of calcium, phosphorus, potassium, iron and magnesium also are found in peanuts. For a firm figure, for loads of energy, and for good health, consumers can count on peanuts and peanut products.

4-H clubbers Want to help community

By Katrina Kirkland
Sixteen 4-H members spent Tuesday afternoon discussing and planning activities that they could do to help improve their communities. They divided into groups and each group planned an ideal community. Then these were compared to see the different ideas each group had for their community. Seeking answers to questions like, "What is good about my community?", "What is bad about my community?", and "What part do I play in the total picture?", brought on some serious thinking.

Some of the things that were high on the list of opportunities for improvement were roadside garbage, high telephone and food prices, safety, more recreational facilities, and landscaping parks and schools. Plans were made for the next meeting to carry out one of these activities.

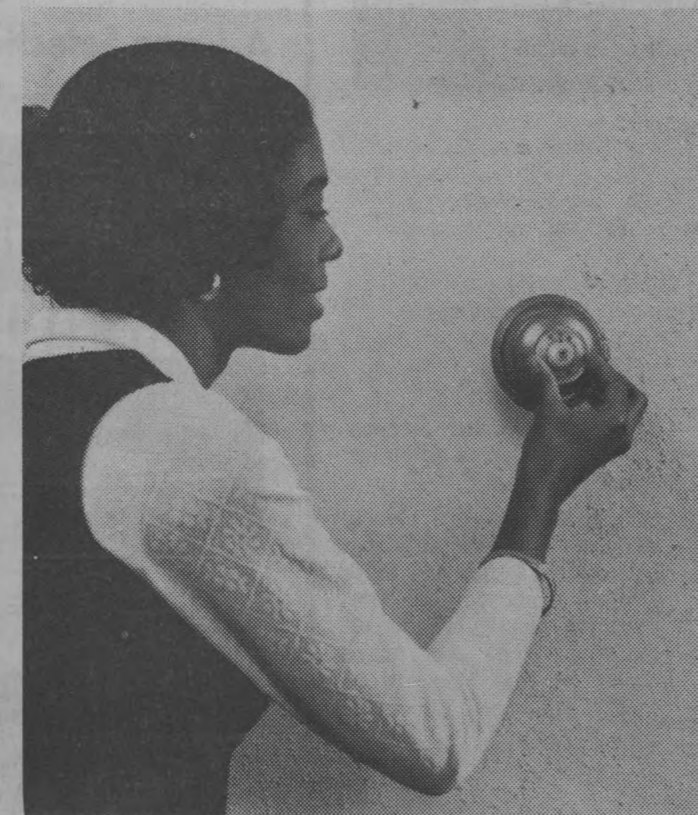

Junior leaders assisting at the meeting were Randy Jones, Gwen Cowart, and Katrina Kirkland.

Please.

Turn it up when you're leaving.
Electricity's too good to waste.

Like to save a little money at home when you're going out for the day? Leave the cool inside. Close windows and doors, draw draperies and turn the air conditioning a few degrees higher. But don't turn it off completely, or extra cooling power will be needed when you return.

For everyday economy, try setting the thermostat at 78 degrees. That may sound a bit warm, but most people find it comfortable. And each degree below that requires five percent more electricity. Remember, air conditioning can consume more energy than all your appliances put together. Electric rates are higher in summer, too, for monthly use above 600 kilowatt-hours.

If you want to cut cooling costs and conserve energy, good insulation is also very important. So are clean filters and proper maintenance of cooling equipment. You can help, as well, by making a conscious effort to use electricity wisely.

It's too good to waste.

Other officers will be elected at the first meeting of the school term.

Final plans were revealed for the H.J.H.S. Band to march in the Rose Parade held in Thomasville on April 27.

Also, we were told of the Spring Concert which will be held at the City Auditorium in Valdosta, May 29.

Entertainment was furnished by four girls of our local band who participated in the Solo and Ensemble Festival recently. They were Dena Earnest, Sharon Moore, Terry Powell and Maureen Poole.

Many H.J.H.S. students participated in the 8-District Solo and Ensemble Festival on Saturday, April 14.

We are all very proud of these girls.

CONTEST

An ugly contest was held at H.J.H.S. this past week. Each contestant was sponsored by a member of the school paper, the "El Tigre". They chose any student they wanted to participate. They took up money. One penny was counted as one vote. The money was used by the staff for expenses.

The winners are as follows: Eve Cornelius - first place; Keely Hobbs, first runner-up, and Helen Devane - second runner-up.

This contest was simply for fun and to raise money for the journalism class. Everyone participating was truly a good sport.

HAHIRA ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

The sixth grade of Hahira Elementary School went on another field trip last Friday. They were accompanied by their teachers, Mrs. Ralder, Mrs. Bretz, and Miss Rigdon. Modern Sun Worship

Monastir is Tunisia's beautiful seaside town to which sun worshippers flock from all over western Europe. But to Moslems of more years ago, Monastir was more. To stand watch for three days atop Monastir's fortifications guaranteed immortality, upon death, into paradise.

Revival is now in progress at Paul Church of God in Christ Cecil. Evangelist Williams of Santa, Ga., is speaker. Everyone is invited to attend. Day will be the climax, with program being held that afternoon. Elder A. Sermons, pastor.

The 5th Sunday Union of the Ga. Baptist Association will be held at Friendship Baptist Church in Quitman. Everyone is invited to attend.

The Senior Supper Club will be held at Sister Mitchell's house on Magnolia Street in Valdosta next Thursday. All club members are urged to attend.

Members of the community are sorry to hear of the hospitalization of Mrs. Stevens in Hahira's Smith Hospital. She is reportedly doing fine.

Mr. James Miller was a patient at Smith Hospital for several days. He is now recuperating at home, and we wish him a very speedy recovery.

Ben Gilbert of Rt. 2, Hahira, is a patient at Smith Hospital in critical condition. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Revival at Rocky Hill Church of God in Christ, held last week, was very inspiring and uplifting. It closed out Sunday night with evening worship.

From Diana Schutz Phillips, Danville, IL: I remember when I was a little girl most of our things were made by hand. I can remember watching my mother sew little dresses for my two sisters and me after she had finished her chores. She would light the coal-oil lamps and sit sewing in the front room long after we children had gone to bed.
My father worked in the coal mines, and one year he made me a doll house from a "Black Diamond" blasting powder box he'd brought home. He very carefully painted and decorated the little wooden box. I was so proud of that doll house. Those were the days when more love and less money went into the things parents gave their children.
It was so comforting, knowing how much our parents loved us, to grow up way back then.

I REMEMBER

Hahiran escapes injury

Mrs. Gene Stalvey of Hahira escaped injury in a car-truck collision which took place Friday afternoon near Hahira.
A 1969 Chevrolet driven by Mrs. Stalvey was struck by a 1973 Ford dump truck driven by Lonnie M. Brown, 25, of Rte. 3, Valdosta, when the Chevrolet attempted to make a turn onto a county road, according to reports.

THE DAIRY BAR IS NOW OPEN AGAIN

A NEW START---Noble Craig, right, and his wife Sally and son Robby talk about the new life they're building now that he has returned from Vietnam. Craig lost an arm, both legs, was partially blinded and deafened by the war.

Tragedy after a war

'Would you love me if...'

By STEVE CONLAN

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — "Would you still love me if I didn't have any arms or legs?" Noble Craig asked his wife the night before he was shipped to Vietnam in 1969. "Roll over and go to sleep," his wife, Sally, replied.

But for Sgt. Noble Craig, United States Army, fate held an answer to the tragic question.

On his 12th day in the battle-torn country, Craig took his last step in Vietnam, and his last step without help for the rest of his life.

While looking for a place to rest after a long, hot combat march, Nobel's right foot came down squarely on a buried American artillery shell — a booby trap with enough explosive force to destroy a small building or knock out an enemy tank.

"Dear Mrs. Craig: We are sorry to inform you that your husband, Sgt. Nobel Craig, has been seriously wounded in Vietnam ...," read the telegram.

"Nobody came to the door — only a telegram," she said.

But the extent of Nobel's injuries could not be realized from the impersonal wording of the Defense Department form letter.

Noble's last step cost him the loss of both legs, his right arm, hearing in his right ear and most of the sight in his right eye.

Noble says he prepared for his tragedy. He even says he saw it coming.

Speaking from the living room of his home here, Noble traces the uncanny chain of events that led up to that day in Vietnam, and the trials of readjustment he and Sally and their 4-year-old son, Robby, have had to live through.

"I'm sure I have ESP or something," he says. "I knew I was going to get hurt in Vietnam."

"I even took the precaution to make sure my father was notified first in the event of my injury."

Noble stood 6 feet, 2 inches tall and weighed 205 pounds when he was drafted May 3, 1967, and sent to Vietnam in April, 1969.

"The night before he was to leave for Vietnam, Noble was mumbling in his sleep, and rolled over and asked me if I would love him if he had no arms or legs," Sally said.

"I just told him not to be ridiculous and to go to sleep."

"He's always doing that to me," she said. "I'll be thinking of something to tell Noble, and he will be up doing it before I can ask him. Somehow he always knows what I'm thinking."

Noble married Sally, his high school girl friend, a few months after she graduated in 1968.

"I knew I was going to get hurt badly, so I had to have a reason to return," Noble says of his Vietnam tour.

Before he was shipped to a war he didn't ask for or support, Sally gave birth to Robby (short for Robert).

"Robby was only 2 months old when his father left," Sally said. "He didn't know at the time what was happening, but just recently he is beginning to understand."

Recently, while driving with Noble in his specially equipped car, Robby whispered to his mother, "Mom, daddy doesn't have any arms or legs, does he?"

Sally replied, "No, he doesn't." And in a low voice, Robby said, "Let's not tell him."

"He really loves his dad and wants to protect him," Sally said.

Noble's spirits are high. There's even a look in his eye and a firmness in his handshake that tells you not to worry, everything's going to be all right. And everything seems to be.

"That's the way it is with Noble," Sally says. "Even the first day I saw him at Letterman's Hospital in San Francisco, all he could do was form a small smile with his fractured jaw and wired teeth and say, 'Don't worry, honey, everything is going to be all right.'"

Two nights a week he's at woodshop at a nearby high school. Besides building lamps, chairs and chess tables, Noble has paneled the inside of his home.

He scoots around on a padded cushion on four small wheels, pushing himself with his artificial right arm.

"He has artificial legs, but refuses to use them," Sally says.

Noble is a hot-rod buff. He works on his own car, which is rigged for racing.

Noble says he is a good driver, and he was upset when the insurance company tried to charge him $2,000 for automobile coverage.

"I've been driving for six years, and I haven't gotten a ticket yet," Noble says.

Hypnotism used in hold-ups in Spain

Hotels and banks on Spain's Costa del Sol have been alerted to watch out for two Oriental-looking tourists who are said to carry out hold-ups using hypnotism.

The cashier at the Hotel Melia in Torremolinos told police recently that he was in "an hypnotic trance" seconds after the men had asked to change money and couldn't remember handing over 50,000 pesetas.

747 TALLY

The 747s operated on the North Atlantic during 1972 averaged 190 passengers and 11,569 pounds of cargo per flight, according to a U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board Form 41, submitted by U.S. airlines.

"The meanest mother in the world"

I had the meanest mother in the world and I want everyone to know just how mean she was. While other kids ate candy for breakfast I had to have cereal, eggs and toast. It was the same way at lunch and supper. We never seemed to get what we wanted, we always had to eat that silly "grown up" food.

And you know, you'd think we lived in a chain gang. My mother always insisted on knowing where I was going and when I would return. There was none of this "I'll see you sometime tonight" with her. And if I said I'd be home at eleven, you'd better bet your "BP" I was home or had called and told her why I couldn't get back on time. And I'm ashamed to admit it but she didn't mind taking the hickory to me, even after I was over 12, if I disobeyed. Looks like parents would learn a little of the modern psychology that a needed whipping would make a child emotionally unbalanced. But my mother didn't know that, so when we needed discipline she didn't have any better sense than to give it.

And another thing; I couldn't sleep until thirty minutes before school time like most kids. No, I was up at 5 a.m. delivering the paper. And when I got home I often had to milk or get in wood for the day before I had breakfast and went to school. My mother was so mean I couldn't even play ball in the afternoon. No sir! I had to work in a grocery store until dark and then come home and do my "night work" before supper. Of course, I blamed my bad school grades on all the work she made me do.

And I almost forgot; while most of my friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old-fashioned mother wouldn't even let me see a girl until I was about 15, and that had to be at the church. Boy, was she a "bug" about church. We went and went and went. I used to think she and the preacher had formed some kind of a scheme to keep me in "the straight and narrow."

My mother was a complete flop. None of her eight children have ever been arrested, or divorced, or even beat their mate. Each of her five boys served in the armed forces during WWII. She made us work so hard that most of us worked our way right on through college. The others would have but they got married instead. I just can't understand why we never got to march in a protest parade, take part in a riot, or burn our draft cards. We missed a lot by having such a mean mother because she forced into us all her good virtues. But today, I am trying to raise my children just as mean as she did us. I don't guess I know any better. And for some reason if my children ever call me "mean" I'll thank God -- because you see, He gave me the "meanest" mother in the world. And I love her for it!

REVIEW

Up-to-date primer on China

THE FORBIDDEN CITY; by Roderick MacFarquhar; Newsweek Books; 172 pages; $10.

As might be expected with the opening of formerly forbidden Red China, authors with varying qualifications are rushing into print with books on the giant of Asian communism.

Roderick MacFarquhar is truly an "old China hand" and perhaps this gives his "The Forbidden City" a bit more attraction for readers either expert or naive on the nation President Nixon cracked for visitors from abroad.

MacFarquhar does far more than discuss the relics of the Forbidden City although he does provide 150 pictures of various ancient pieces and places.

In somewhat over 40,000 words he goes deeply into the development of Chinese civilization, from the Kublai Khan days of 1274 to the 20th Century. In his writing he calls on long experience as an editor of China Quarterly and other research into contemporary Chinese history.

He points out that today the term Forbidden City is a misnomer, for there is very little in Peking that is not as open to the public as the palace museum. However, for the uninformed, he writes a highly interesting and descriptive section on the Dragon Pavement houses, plus detailed information on the former Imperial Ancestral Temple, now dubbed by the Reds as the People's Palace of Culture. It includes theaters, sports arenas and other recreational facilities — some of which are depicted in vivid color.

Color photos (one-third of the 150 illustrations are in color) include delicately tinted scrolls, pottery and a number of diagrams, maps and charts.

Card of thanks

I wish to express my thanks to my many friends and neighbors, doctors and nurses for the many acts of kindness I received during my recent illness.

May God bless each of you in my prayer.
