is written on Tuesday noon from the State Capitol after returning from with the Republican Caucus of the House. Some of the most able members of the House are Republicans. Mike McNeal, the minority leader, is one of the best speakers in the House, but we rural representatives oppose him strongly when he attacks the Ant program. This has a good program for the landowners and we are glad to have had a part in getting the money in the budget to maintain it.

George Larson, a young Republican member of the House, author of a very controversial Bill called The Scenic Resources Bill. Other than on the Market Bulletin go-out weekly we have had a number of letters on Larson's Bill. Any other, The Alapaha River is one named to be kept in its natural state along with other rivers in Georgia. The river is included in the bill and this one is bringing opposition from people in Albany and Thomas County where it is hoped Federal money will be appropriated for a project to dam up the river for industrial use. A hearing on the Bill will be held here at the Capitol next Tuesday.

before going to lunch a vote was taken on the "Shinestone Bill" which at all meetings where the money is involved to the public. John Greer had an amendment to exclude the Public Service Commission but this was voted down. Pafford had advocated meetings at the Public Service Commission ever since the Commission on the Commission you might say he won by overwhelming victory in the passage of this Bill. The vote was 168-1.

The General Assembly will meet Friday of this week for a two-week period in order for the Appropriations Committee at the budget in order for it was rumored today a teacher-raise of $600 will be included without an increase in taxes. Governor Carter had recommended $507. It will be good to be home for a few days and we will be able to have your suggestions on lending legislation or any Bills that may be forthcoming during the remainder of the session.

Two hurt in accident

Two persons were injured, neither seriously, in Cook County near Ray City Saturday when their car hit a road and utility pole, the state police said.

Officers said James B. Nett, 33, and his wife, Mary Nett, 30, of Hahira, received injuries when the 1970 car he was driving ran off a road near Ray City. Both were taken to Adel Memorial Hospital according to police, where they were treated and released. About $55 worth of damage was done to the sign and utility pole, and about $750 to the car, officers estimated.

Police said no charges were filed in the 3:45 p.m. accident.

Floyd McNeal

A 25 pounder

A group of friends from Hahira enjoyed a fishing trip near Palatka, Florida during the weekend.

Floyd McNeal, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Orvis McNeal, was the proud fisherman of the group when he landed a 25-pound catfish from St. John's River.

It was reported that a lot of fish were caught during the trip with Floyd bringing home the largest one. Those enjoying the weekend at the McNeal summer house besides Floyd and his parents were Mr. and Mrs. Winston Jordan, Jesse Griffin, Sonny Martin and M. W. Kirkland.

He's the praying partner

Tordeau Decalur is a member of a revival team. He prays while he and Rev. and Mrs. Hardy Ulrich go around the country conducting revivals. Tordeau is not what you would ordinarily think of a revival crusader. He can't speak a word, has four legs and is only three years old.

The fact is, Tordeau Decalur is a silver French poodle. Rev. Ulrich and his revival team are leading a revival this week at the Adel Assembly of God Church. Services are running nightly at 7:30. Mrs. Ulrich said that Tordeau was a wedding anniversary present two and one-half years ago. He was quick to catch on to tricks. It was not long before he would sit up on his hind legs and walk. It was through this trick that Tordeau learned to pray.

When a small foot stool is placed on the floor, Tordeau goes into his act. He puts his front feet on the stool, his hind feet on the floor, lies his head on the stool between his front paws, and makes a noise just as if he is praying. When Rev. Ulrich says, "Amen," the poodle stops his praying and hops down from the stool.

Mrs. Ulrich says Tordeau prays about 10 times a day, and the revival team has crossed the U.S. together three times. Although Tordeau is not used in the regular revival services, Rev. Ulrich said he is a big hit with the children.

During a Children's Church next Sunday morning during the regular worship hour at Adel Assembly of God, Tordeau will take part in the services.

Rev. Gene Cumpston, pastor, invites all children to come to Sunday School and stay for church to see Tordeau.

His prayers just might be answered, and you might want to be there to see what they are.

This year's Heart Fund Drive will see more than 40,000 volunteers distribute life-saving information about the early warning signs of heart attack and the emergency steps to follow, in an attempt to cut back the growing death rate due to this leading killer.

Volunteers will also receive contributions to the Heart Fund to enable the Heart Association to continue its programs of research, education and community services throughout the state.

Since Georgia Heart's first grant to research in 1950, more than $2 million has been channeled into research projects in Georgia institutions and another $1 million has been allotted to the national research program of the American Heart Association.

Results of such research have been new methods to prevent rheumatic fever, medication to control almost any type of high blood pressure, artificial valves to replace diseased ones in the heart, prevention of some types of stroke, discovery of anti-clotting agents which can lessen chances of heart attack or stroke, correction of congenital heart defects and many other life-saving discoveries.

During the past three years, the Heart Association has conducted an intensive cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training program to provide emergency personnel throughout the state who are competent in administering the life-saving technique to victims of heart-lung arrest. More than 17,000 policemen, firemen, paramedical personnel, nurses and others in high risk and emergency occupations have been trained in the technique by Ga. Heart and 2,500 have become

Mercer reportedly solving problems

From Florida Times Union
By Carey Cameron

ADEL, Ga. — "All Baptist Colleges are having their problems, including Mercer, but I think Mercer has a good chance of continuing its long years of service."

The words of optimism came from the new chairman of the board of trustees of Georgia's largest Baptist School, Mercer University.

Charles Giddens, 62, of Adel is a reluctant chairman but he seems well-qualified for the post.

The board governing the 2,000-student university has a rule that after serving six years as a member, a person must step off for at least a year before he can be named to a new term.

Giddens, a 1931 Mercer graduate in economics, has served on the board most of the time since 1951. Macon atorney T. Baldwin Martin Jr. has some 50 years of service to the University and 10 years as chairman but his term ran out in December and he must aid the school as an unofficial friend for a year.

In the latter part of last year Giddens had surgery and Martin and Dr. Rufus Harris, president of Mercer and president of Tulane for 23 years before returning to his alma mater, visited Giddens in the hospital. Then they visited him at home as he was recovering. They wanted him to succeed Martin as chairman.

"I did so very reluctantly," said Giddens who was voted the top post in December. "I felt they needed a resident (of Macon) man. I wouldn't have taken it if Baldwin hadn't agreed to continue to help the school."

The Mercer board number about 30 persons and is very prestigious. U.S. District Judge W. A. Bottle, Judge Griffin Bell of the Georgia Court of Appeals, Macon newspaper executive Bert Struby and Charles Jay, a Georgia "outstanding young man" winner, are among its members.

"Our board of trustees to me is a fine group of men. I feel honored just to serve with them. They are dedicated," Giddens commented.

Giddens is dedicated himself. Operator of the Adel Trading Co. which is in the building supply and farm tractor business, he is a member of a family that helped build both Adel and Valdosta businesswise and politicalwise. He is a 1927 Valdosta High graduate and is on the executive board of the J. N. Bray Co. in Valdosta.

Charles Giddens is a former Adel city councilman, former hospital board member, a charter director of the Coastal Plain Area Planning and Development Commission and a former chairman of that body.

He says the late June Parrish of Adel, who died a few months ago, inspired him to take part in community affairs.

"I watched him and I could see you never would have a good community unless somebody went to work," Giddens recalls.

Mercer has had financial problems in the past and its campus is bordered by a deteriorating housing area that has caused problems but the Baptist school may be on the threshold of solving problems.

Former Congressman Carl M. Vinson, still very active in spite of the fact that he was in the class of 1902, is heading a $42-million fund drive that promised to be successful.

"It's an endowment and expansion program. We started with $37 million but added $5 million because we thought it should be," Giddens commented.

The fund project was launched Nov. 12, 1971.

"We have $7 million already subscribed in a five-year program. One of the major projects is to gather in some 35 acres that has some deteriorating housing and add it to the campus. We have already bought $150,000 worth of property in this area on the open market," Giddens observed.

The board chairman credits Dr. Harris and financial vice president William T. Haywood as making decisions that have Mercer on a sound foundation now.

Founded by the Rev. Jesse Mercer in 1833 at Penfield, Mercer was moved to Macon in 1871. It has full accreditation. Its schools are the College of Liberal Arts, a graduate program in education, the

February is "Heart Month"

Governor Jimmy Carter has proclaimed Feb. as "Georgia Heart Month" in coordination with the Georgia Heart Association's 1972 Heart Fund Drive.

Five-year old Michael Jackson of Atlanta, Georgia Heart's Heart Fund Ambassador, who underwent open-heart surgery at St. Joseph's Infirmary last July, and George E. Smith, President of J.M. Tull Industries and GHA Chairman of the Board, received the Governor's Proclamation.

The proclamation defined the problem of heart disease in Georgia and asked support for the programs of the Heart Association, the only organization in the state exclusively devoted to combating the problem.

In 1970, the latest year for which statistics are available, 51% of the state's total deaths were caused by heart disease, and heart attack alone was responsible for half of those.

This year's Heart Fund Drive will see more than 40,000 volunteers distribute life-saving information about the early warning signs of heart attack and the emergency steps to follow, in an attempt to cut back the growing death rate due to this leading killer.

Volunteers will also receive contributions to the Heart Fund to enable the Heart Association to continue its programs of research, education and community services throughout the state.

Walter F. George School of Law and Southern School of Pharmacy in Atlanta.

Outsiders usually are surprised to hear that Mercer owns the pharmacy school. According to Giddens, its administrators came to the Mercer board a few years ago and said they were threatened with loss of accreditation. The pharmacy school leaders promised to help raise their own funds if Mercer would take it over and lend its prestige and facilities to solving the accreditation needs.

The pharmacy school has become a leader in the past three years in fighting drug abuse and it has been designated to administer Georgia's methadone program. Construction is under way on a $2.2-million building that will be the first of a $40-million medical center to be located adjacent to Georgia Baptist Hospital in Atlanta. (This should have a side effect of upgrading its neighborhood.)

To be relatively small in enrollment Mercer has an outstanding alumni list that is amazingly long. It also boasts of some distinguished honorary members.

Actual alumni include Vinson who was one of the most powerful men in Congress before retiring, the late Sen. Walter F. George who rivals Sen. Richard B. Russell on the list of great U.S. senators from Georgia, journalists Mark Ethridge, Jack Tarver, and Buford Boone, Harley Langdale, the Valdosta agribusinessman, and former Gov. Ellis Arnall.

The school claims as alumni six Georgia governors, two Alabama governors and one each from Texas and Puerto Rico. It has supplied four U.S. senators and 11 congressmen. Judges include one U.S. Court of Claims, two 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, five U.S. District judges, seven Georgia Supreme Court, five Georgia Court of Appeals and 26 state superior courts heads.

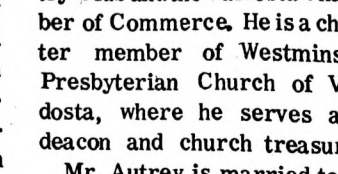

Football was dropped years ago at Mercer which still is strong in several other sports. But while it had football it turned out people like coaches Wright Bazemore and Wally Butts who need no further identification for sports fans.

George T. Stallings, manager of the 1914 "Miracle" Boston Braves, was Mercer's baseball "trainer" before going to the major leagues.

In the honorary degree field, Giddens is especially proud of the fact that Mercer was the only college to give Gen. Robert E. Lee any degree. He received a doctor of laws. Sen. Russell, news executive Eugene Patterson, former Gov. Ernest Vandiver, publisher Ralph McGill, banker John Sibley, Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, and President Wilson's Secretary of the Treasury, William Gibbs McAdoo, are among other honorees.

Mr. Autrey is married to the former Miss Katherine Jones, of Orlando. They have two children, Capt. Walter G. Autrey, Jr., U. S. Marine Corps,

It said, "4-H is one of the most remarkable educational ideas of this century. The concept of learning by doing utilizing an experimental base geared to real life situations is of inestimable value."

THIS WORLD OF OURS

Here is something to remember if you want to do your share in helping to clean up our environment: If you can throw it into the garbage can, then it doesn't belong in the sink drain. Special problem materials are:
— cooking fats: feed fat to the birds;
— coffee grounds: these can be added to compost piles or earthworm colonies, as can tea leaves, vegetable scraps and peelings, and other table and cooking leftovers or scraps. Compost can then be used to fertilize gardens, plants, and lawns.
It's a simple rule to remember to help keep our water a little cleaner and purer - don't use sink drains as catch-alls.

instructors. Records show that at least 111 lives were saved last year due to CPR. In other programs the Heart Association sent 349,000 pieces of free literature in response to requests from the public, provided 3,000 films showing to more than 58,000 people, coordinated a system of 14 Georgia Heart Clinics which annually handles about 20,000 indigent patient visits and sponsored numerous scientific seminars in the field of cardiovascular diseases.

Sports club crushes Valdosta

The Hahira Sports Club, stung by an opening game defeat, took it out on Valdosta in their second game with an easy 63-22 triumph, stated H.A. Miley, Coach. "This time the entire team was there and they all played great ball, the coach said. Susan Shaw, Beth Perry and Betty Passmore all hit in double figures, though Passmore played a great deal of the time at guard. "The work of the guards was inspiring to watch also," Miley added.

Family SHOPPING BAG

ITEM: Roast meat thermometers were designed for use in cooking large cuts of meat by dry heat; for example, standing rib roast of beef, rib eye (Delmonico), sirloin tip or rump, pork loin, leg of pork, leg of lamb, or lamb rib roast. The meat thermometer is placed in the thickest part of the meat so the bulb is centered, resting neither in fat nor on the bone.

ITEM: Only 50 to 60 percent of American households have diets which meet recommended nutrition standards. Ironically, low income is not the only reason for malnutrition in this country. Much malnutrition results simply because food choices are determined by personal preferences or dislikes, and because people do not know what kinds of food they should eat to maintain good health.

State Insurance Office To Open In Valdosta

If you have questions or problems concerning insurance but are unable to travel to Atlanta to get help from the State Insurance Department, now there is a way to solve your problem. Comptroller General Johnnie L. Caldwell has implemented a method by which insurance field investigators travel throughout the state just to answer questions and assist in solving claim problems for Georgia policyholders who are otherwise unable to obtain the services of the State Insurance Department investigation office.

"In the past, the Atlanta office handled all such problems," Caldwell stated. "Unfortunately, the office was not effectively or economically reaching all the people who need the State Insurance Department's services. When I took office, we began to look for a way to allow those Georgians in other parts of the state to receive help despite the great distances involved. The field investigation team is the result of our efforts."

The insurance field investigator from Comptroller General Johnnie L. Caldwell's office will be in Valdosta on Feb. 8 to help with your insurance problems. Field Investigator Kuygier will be in the Grand Jury or Juvenile Court Room from 9:00 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. through the cooperation of the county commissioners, their chairman W. P. (Billy) Langdale and other public officials.

Comptroller General Johnnie L. Caldwell also serves as State Insurance Commissioner.

Thought For Food

Create a juicy, spicy frankfurter specialty called a "Coney Dog." It's easy to do. Just heat canned barbecue ground beef and spoon over the hot franks on buns.

For breakfast variety and flavor, add chopped cooked meat to scrambled eggs as they begin to thicken. Bacon, sausage, ham, luncheon meat, frankfurters, or dried beef are appropriate additions.

For a special club style sandwich, stack thinly sliced leftover roast beef or pork, coleslaw, crisp bacon, tomato slices and sliced stuffed olives between two slices of toasted wheat bread spread lightly with cream cheese.

Beneficiaries share responsibility in assuring Social Security checks

Today, social security beneficiaries share a responsibility with the Social Security Administration in assuring their monthly checks continue each month, and in the correct amount. Events such as changing of an address, marriage, divorce, work or student attendance may determine whether a beneficiary is due a check or whether the check arrives on time or even arrives at all. For example, unless the Social Security Administration is notified of the correct mailing address, the check may be delayed a few days, or the check may be lost or stolen as a result of the incorrect address. Events such as marriage, divorce, work or student attendance, may determine whether or not a person will continue to be eligible for benefits. Without prompt notification of these events, the beneficiary may receive benefits to which he is not entitled. Social Security beneficiaries must continue to carry out their responsibilities of quickly reporting any event which may affect their entitlement to social security. When a social security beneficiary does not promptly report an event which may affect his social security check, he may have his check delayed, or he may be required to return some checks he's not entitled to. Either of these situations would cause a severe hardship on some people, and this is what we are trying to avoid. If you are not sure what you should report, or how to report it, call your social security office in Valdosta. The telephone number is WX6500. Just dial your operator and ask for it.

Remember to repackage before putting them in the freezer. Always freeze the giblets separately. It is easier to package a whole fryer -- that is, remove all air and make the package air tight. Too, there are fewer cut surfaces exposed. If you plan to use the fryers in halves, you can easily split the fryer in half, place a layer of freezer paper between the halves and wrap in freezer paper. Perhaps you have other ideas -- you can use the breasts for special occasions, dark meat to fry, bony pieces for chicken pie or soup. Cut the fryers up and package like pieces together. You're being smart again.

Remember, use moisture-vapor proof packaging materials, package to keep all air out, seal air tight, label and store at zero temperature or lower. For more information on freezing meats and poultry contact your Extension Service office in the Federal Building or call 242-1536.

A SHOE FOR YOU:
If the shoe fits, wear it. On the other foot, if the shoe does not fit, don't wear it. This sounds like unnecessary advice, but it's surprising how many women wear uncomfortable, ill fitting shoes.

The first step to good fitting shoes is correct measurement of the foot. Find a dependable salesclerk in the shoe store or department store you patronize. Have your foot measured each time you buy shoes. Sit at ease in a comfortable, upright position while measurements are being taken.

Most people find the right foot is slightly larger. Occasionally the left foot has grown to greater proportions. In any case, have your shoe fitted to the larger foot.

Always try on the shoes you are considering. Walk around; take time to be sure they fit well. Check the fit by appearance in a mirror and by the way they feel. Correctly fitted shoes are comfortable from the beginning. They do not have to be "broken in." Breaking in forces the foot to tolerate a misfitted shoe and can cause enlarged toe joints, corns and weakened arches.

Plant dogwoods

A reminder to gardeners that now is the time to put these beautiful trees into the ground. Take heed of these tips, as inadequate soil preparation is responsible for poor growth of many young dogwoods in Ga.

Dig a hole at least 18 inches deep and three feet across, regardless of the size tree to be planted. Increase by one-third soil removed from the hole with organic matter, such as peat moss, leaf mold or pine bark.

Mix the soil and organic matter thoroughly before placing the mixture around the roots of the young tree.

Planting too deeply is a major reason for many dogwood growth difficulties. Trees with ball and/or burlap covered root systems should be placed in the hole so that the top of the soil ball is even with the surrounding ground.

The week in review Here's what your representatives up to

The House continued action on reorganization, but put more emphasis on other legislative matters as the third week of the 1972 legislative session closed Friday.

The first two weeks of the session had concentrated almost exclusively on reorganization of state government, but while that subject remained very prominent in House actions, members also turned to a variety of other subjects beginning Monday.

On Monday, a day devoted largely to committee work, former Gov. Marvin Griffin addressed the House and spoke against a bill that would have changed the state flag.

Among committee actions that day, a measure requiring all state agencies to hold their meetings in public was approved by the State of the Republic Committee. The House Education Committee also voted for a proposed constitutional amendment which would allow the Legislature, rather than the governor, to appoint the members of the State Board of Education.

On Tuesday, another day devoted in large part to committee work, the House Special Judiciary Committee passed out without recommendation a proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the office of lieutenant governor.

On Wednesday the House passed a number of bills. One of the most far-reaching was a measure to freeze the required local property tax support for basic education costs.

The bill would freeze the dollar level of local support for the next school year at approximately the same level as this year -- $78.5 million. Without the legislation, the local share of school costs would soar to an anticipated $117 million next year.

The bill freezes the dollar level by reducing the ratio of local county tax digests. At present, each county is required to pay .29 of its local tax digest into the Minimum Foundation Program for Education. The legislation approved by the House would reduce that ratio to .195 for next year.

In Wednesday committee action, the House Ways and Means Committee voted that two "windfall" revenue bills "do pass." One would require employers withholding state income tax to remit withholdings for the first two weeks in the month by the 20th of the month if the total exceeds $150. The remaining two weeks would be remitted according to the present practice of remitting by the 20th of the following month.

The two measures would provide a one-time "windfall" of an estimated $40 million.

Also on Wednesday, the House Judiciary Committee postponed action on a bill to allow gasoline dealers to go into court and seek damages against distributors for terminating contracts.

On Thursday the House approved, among a number of bills, one that enacts into positive legislation the reorganization provisions already approved under Gov. Jimmy Carter's proposals.

The purpose of the affirmative legislation was to provide a backup in case the unique method of enacting reorganization under House Bill 1 should be disapproved by a court. The same bill approved two sections -- 104 and 105 -- in a different form than had been offered by the governor and vetoed.

On Thursday the House also voted for a proposed constitutional amendment that would abolish the intangible tax -- a tax on stocks, bonds, bank accounts, etc. If approved by the Senate, the proposal would go on November's general election ballot to be decided by the state's voters.

In Thursday committee action, the House Judiciary Committee voted "do pass" a bill which would lower the age of legal majority in Georgia from 21 to 18. The measure would give 18-year-olds all the rights, privileges and responsibilities of adults. The House also turned down a proposal to change the state flag.

On Friday the House approved a proposed constitutional amendment to exempt the property of non-profit hospitals from ad valorem taxes. It also voted for a bill to allow the chief administrative officer of a unit of Georgia's University System to order a person off campus.

Also on Friday the House approved another reorganization bill approving a number of non-controversial sections which had been vetoed earlier primarily for language changes and other minor reasons.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Winter
It's the middle of winter and many places in this country the land is desolate, cold, unfeeling. The trees look stark and dead. We feel an emptiness within ourselves. We wonder will spring ever come?

Now is the time to think about our lives, to renew our faith, to thank God for so abundantly providing for us in this great land, and to help our brothers in despair.

The beauty of winter unfolds when we use it as a comparison. How joyous our hearts feel when the first signs of spring appear! How renewed our spirit feels when we once again see the hills and valleys washed in greenery!

Leisure time spending will reach $250 billion by 1975, the American Automobile Association predicted.

Why can't life's problems hit us when we're 18 and know everything?

The Modern American Farmer

Joseph Weisshaar looks the part of the modern American farmer. Educated at Iowa State and conservative in speech and manner, efficient in the latest technology, he is industrious and proudly independent. He is 39 years old and grossed over $100,000 last year selling hogs. He has presumably "made it". The fact is he is a troubled man, fearful that he and other farmers like him in this country cannot survive the industrial and financial changes in American agriculture that have been brought about in recent years by the emergence of enormous "Agribusiness" corporations.

After ten years of applying lessons taught him in Ag College, Weisshaar last year reached his personal goal - the magic circle of 50,000 farmers who sold at least $100,000 worth of farm products and produced one-third of the nation's food. It was not a happy experience. "I figured I would have it made when I reached $100,000 in sales," said Weisshaar. He farms 540 acres near Creston, Iowa. He says, "I ended up $1300 more in debt. It seems like the bigger you get the harder you fall. You depend heavily on credit and with one bad year of hog prices you are in deep trouble."

The Weissshaars have taken only one vacation in 10 years. The family bought only one costly item last year, a new refrigerator. Mary Jane Weisshaar, an attractive college graduate and mother of three young children, paid for it by driving a corn truck on a job that begins at 5 a.m.

Will the family farm survive in the years ahead? Or will agriculture become like steel, autos and chemicals - an industry dominated by giant conglomerate corporations such as Tenneco? In that case the nation will have lost its prized Jeffersonian ideal, praised in myth and song, of the yeoman farmer as the backbone of America.

What will become of rural America if the greatest migration in history - 40 million to the cities in 50 years - is further accelerated? Farmers have provided the economic base of the small towns and that base is becoming perilously small.

How will the nation's food supply be affected? Productivity efficiency of the family farmer and general affluence have made food a relative bargain in the U. S. Can the conglomerates provide a steady, efficient supply of food?

On all these questions the symptoms are not encouraging for the family farm system. A million farms are eliminated every 10 years and only 2.9 million remain. The average farmer today is 58 years old - compared to a median age of 38 for all Americans in the work force. Young aspirants who would like to fill the retiring farmers' shoes can't get capital. And many who start farming soon quit discouraged by low returns. Mr. Weisshaar just recently joined the NFO because he realized that farmers cannot long remain in the picture if they have nothing to say about the price of the products he produces. It's time for all farmers to take a good long look at they are facing instead of trying for ways to get around the problem, without doing anything about the real culprit. Prices. No farmer can big enough alone to face these problems. Why not together with others working at solving the problem and only need your help support to accomplish it. THE NFO NOW!
