Police department no longer cramped

Sgt. Larry Carter opens one of the cell doors in the adult cell block which has three cells.

After being somewhat cramped and limited in space for several years, the city of Hahira's law officials have finally moved into a new headquarters located at the rear of City Hall.

The local police unit made the move to their recently completed offices about five weeks ago from their former office housed in the main city hall building, according to Police Chief David Webb.

The new department, which is panelled and centrally air-conditioned, consists of a small lobby, a dispatcher's desk, squad room with lockers, bathroom, an office for the police chief, juvenile and women's jail cells. The entrance at the back of the new area opens to the lobby.

City Councilman James Barger, who was in charge of the construction project, said the $6,000 annex was built through joint funds from a state grant and city monies. The state funds, which totaled $2,500 were obtained through the State Crime Commission, and the additional $3,500 came from the city.

Barger said the city officials had originally intended to spend only $5,000 for building costs, but the air-conditioning system and plate glass windows increased the total.

James Blease and Floyd Williams of Barney contracted the project, and tiling, painting and additional finishing work were done by city employees.

Begun last January, the basis of the 400-square foot annex was formed by enclosing an existing shelter at the rear of the city hall building. The adjacent juvenile and women's cells were once a maintenance storage area.

Police Chief Webb said, "We have about twice the office space now that we had up in City hall ... and feel that the police department is now better equipped to do its job with this new building."

The old police office has been converted to an office for Mrs. Catherine Pafford, city clerk.

Hahira's city hall was built in 1926 and the renovation this year is its second major one. The first was done in 1968 when the cell block was moved to the rear of the building and the old cell block area was converted into a library.

They climaxed their week with a cook-out Friday night at the home of Mrs. Robertson.

Bro. Stokes thanks everyone who helped to make this Bible School interesting and such an opportunity for all children.

 THEN BOARDING HOUSE -Mrs. Mattie Massey stands on the porch of the house as it looked after 1914 when she operated it as a boarding house.

... Today - Granny's Attic

Once blacksmith shop ... now Granny's Attic

By John Crowley

The ancient structure on the corner of East Lawson and Church streets here recently entered the latest of its many roles. Few buildings in the town of Hahira have a history as long, varied, and fascinating as that known to most as the Old Massey House, and lately rechristened as "Granny's Attic."

The exact date of the buildings construction is not known, but having originally served as a blacksmith shop, the date of construction may be assumed to have been around 1890, corral with the genesis of the settlement of Hahira, such an establishment having been vital to the then remote, mainly agricultural community. During the years the Smithy was lodged in the building, the shop itself was in the lower story, and an outside ramp led to the upper floor where wagons and buggies were stored.

Sometime after the incorporation of the town (1892), the blacksmith shop was removed elsewhere and the first Hahira school was established in the old shop. The late Mrs. Avie Stanfill, Mrs. Nellie Rains, and Mrs. Merle McNeal were among those who attended there. Legend has it that the decision to remove the school came about when the upper floor threatened to collapse during a commencement exercise, causing the precipitate exit of dignified officials, citizens, students, and romancing couples in the lower story. Whatever the cause, a new brick structure was built on the site of the present school in 1907.

For several years thereafter the old school served a variety of purposes such as news office, masonic hall, and bicycle - tombstone shop.

In 1914, the longest period in the buildings history, commenced with its purchase by Mrs. Mattie Massey. Mrs. Massey operated a boarding house, and added the porches and kitchen to the building. At this time the house had eight fireplaces, six now being left after the recent remodeling. At the death of Mrs. Massey, the property was left to her son, Bill and daughter, Lois. At the death of Bill Massey, Lois Massey became sole owner. Miss Lois Massey's tenancy in the house throughout the memory of most citizens will result in its being called the 'Lois Massey house' for decades hereafter.

Upon Miss Lois Massey's death, the property was left to two nieces and a nephew who sold it to Mrs. Wallace Fields in October of 1972. Mrs. Fields has done extensive remodeling and operates a Gift Shop named "Granny's Attic" which opened for business May 21 with a Grand Opening June 9. The shop is staffed by Mrs. Wallace Fields, Miss Pam Fields, and Mrs. Donna Mathis. The shop carries soap, candles, dried flowers, stoneware, stemware, fine crystal and many other gift items.

This ancient landmark building has sent forth a great variety of gifts to the people of Hahira. As a Smithy it supplied the tools that build the old settlement, as a school it educated our early citizens, as a boarding house it sheltered many young men who later made a mark here, as a home it housed a family noted for its culture and gentility. Now, remodeled to be one of the most beautiful structures in Hahira, it supplies us with lovely objects to beautify our homes.

ROCK EAGLE FOUR-H CENTER -- Leon Ellis of Madison County, one of the returned prisoners of war, will reach back at least 15 years into his past when he attends the 40th annual State Four-H Council meeting at the Rock Eagle Four-H Center next week.

GARDEN TIPS FOR JUNE AND JULY

Prolong Bloom of Annuals:

Many annuals such as marigolds, zinnias, cleome, and others can provide color in the garden or large beautiful cut flowers for long periods of time. For this to be a reality a certain amount of care is necessary. Plants must be kept healthy, free of insects and diseases. They must be watered during dry periods and fertilized at monthly to six week intervals. A thorough watering once a week will keep new growth and flowers developing. For neatness and continued growth and flowering, prune or pinch each old flower as it fades. Otherwise, a portion of the food produced in the plant will go to seed development rather than growth of leaves, stems, and flowers.

Prune Climbing Roses:

Pruning of different types of roses can become confusing to the gardener. Confusion can be thrown out of the window if a bit of thought is given to the flowering habits and growth rates not only of roses but many of our other woody plants. The key is determining the age of the stems or canes in which flowers occur. In the case of "climbing roses" there are as many as three types because climbers may be the standard climbing varieties such as Dr. Huey, Dr. Van Fleet, Silver Moon and Paul Scarlet; the climbing hybrid teas such as Crimson Glory, Climbing peace, Climbing Red Radiance, Climbing Tiffany; and the rambler or pillar varieties such as Dr. J.H. Nicholas, Climbing Pinkie, and Climbing Don Juan.

The objectives of pruning are the same for all types of climbers. They are to remove dead, diseased, and weak wood to maintain desired height and form of the plant. Remove all dead canes to ground level. Where parts of a cane or stem is dead prune back to live wood. Make cuts about 1/4 inch above a healthy growth bud. With the standard climbers which are rampant growers, the major drastic pruning is necessary during the late winter or early spring. Remove several of the oldest canes at the base of the plant. Blooms are produced on laterals from the main frame work canes of the plant. After blooming, prune these laterals back to six to twelve inches in length.

The climbing hybrid tea varieties are less vigorous growers. Keep dead canes removed and prune back any damaged canes to live wood in late winter or early spring.

Rambler or pillar should be pruned immediately after the early and main periods of bloom. Most of the old canes may be removed as next seasons flowers will be produced on canes that grow between now and next year. Remember, with all rose types, the more vigorous the variety the heavier the pruning.

Customer Report #3

"Electric rates seem high now. Why does Georgia Power need another retail increase, and why is it an emergency?"

We don't like asking for higher rates, but your electric service depends on it. Here are the facts in this critical situation:

1. Unless construction goes forward, within a few years there won't be enough electricity.
2. About 80 percent of the money for construction must be borrowed.
3. We can't borrow the necessary money without emergency relief to increase earnings.

Admittedly, this is simplification of a complex financial matter. And your first reaction may be that it's the company's problem, not yours. But it is yours, too. Because your electric service through the seventies will be affected by what we do right now.

Think, for a moment, what a power shortage would mean to you personally. If you flicked a switch in the dark of night and nothing happened. If electricity were available only for brief periods during the day, and only for essential uses. If your business could operate only part-time instead of daily. If environmental cleanup programs, such as waste treatment or recycling, were affected because of insufficient power.

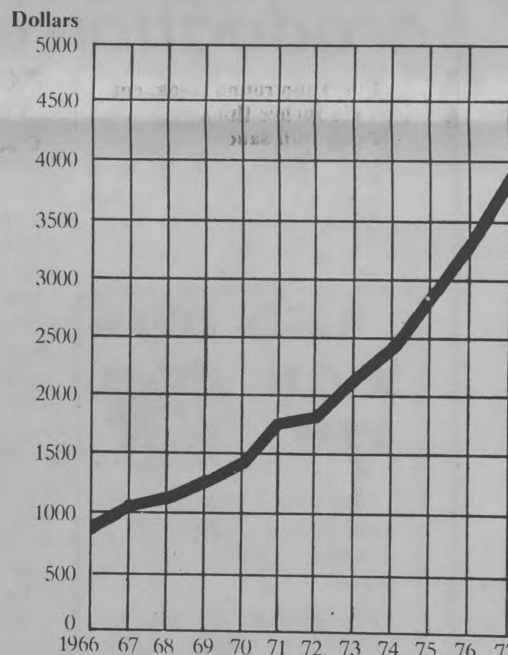

These are not scare tactics. The nation's demand for electric energy is doubling every 10 years. In Georgia, the growth is even faster, doubling about every seven years.

There's another factor that must be considered: the time lag. A steam plant may take six years to complete; nuclear, 10 or even more. We don't anticipate an energy shortage this year, or next. But because of the long lead time for siting and building plants, we must look beyond and plan for future years to assure electric energy for you, your home and your job.

Careful Planning

We have planned what we believe is an adequate construction program: plants to generate power, transmission and distribution lines to deliver it to you. All environmental regulations are being met, at constantly growing costs. Through our parent company and the electric industry, we're aiding research for new fuel sources and cleaner fuels. In short, we've tried our best to look ahead and avoid the possibility of an electric energy shortage in the state.

Such a shortage would go far beyond inconvenience. It would seriously affect the facilities that serve you every day—hospitals, schools, communications, even traffic lights. And industries that provide many thousands of jobs for Georgians. Some phases of our building program already have had to be suspended, due to lack of funds. If further cutbacks are necessary, many of the 5,000 people employed in Georgia Power's construction work will suffer immediate effects. Long-range consequences of a power shortage would extend to thousands of other workers in industry and business.

In June, 1972, Georgia Power asked for retail rate increases of about 12 percent, or totaling $479 million. That was the minimum needed, at that time, to guarantee reliable service for you and more than one million other customers. However, only about one-third of that amount was allowed. It simply wasn't enough to do the job.

A year has passed, and inflation has continued its spiral. All our costs have continued to climb, but earnings have not. During the year, our bond ratings have dropped, which means we must pay higher interest on borrowed money.

Need for Rate Relief

At a time when money is urgently needed for building, our financial position has become extremely critical, and drastic steps are necessary to improve it. We've been forced to appeal the 1972 ruling, and to seek additional rate relief. We can find no alternative.

In November of this year, we must sell $150 million in bonds and $25 million in preferred stock. These sales are absolutely vital to meeting our construction commitments.

Legally, however, we are required to show earnings at specified levels before we can sell securities in those amounts. Current estimates indicate we won't be able to meet the requirements. So we must ask for emergency rate relief to increase earnings sufficiently before November to meet the legal requirements.

To assure you of electricity to meet your future requirements, a request for the full amount of increase needed, including the amount asked in this emergency, will be placed before the Public Service Commission in a short time.

During last year's rate hearings, some special interest groups intervened, using the case to attack the company on unrelated charges. These small but vocal groups demanded that rates be kept at present levels, without any regard for the adverse effects on your electric service.

Shortsighted demands such as this do not, we believe, represent the thinking of most people. The great majority, we feel, are informed enough to realize that cheap energy is no longer possible. Every day you read and hear about continuing inflation, fuel shortages, environmental costs. It's not too difficult to assess the facts and understand that, when the price of everything else has skyrocketed, it just isn't possible for the price of electricity to be the lone exception.

Of course, nobody likes to pay more for electricity. Or for anything else. And we don't pretend you do. But it has become a choice between higher rates or not enough power.

National Predicament

Georgia is not alone in this unhappy situation. All over the country, utilities are being forced to ask for rate relief. As a regulated industry, we cannot raise prices at will but must go through long, expensive hearings and submit vast amounts of technical and financial data in sworn testimony.

In neighboring states, TVA—government-owned and tax-supported—has increased rates so that residential consumers are paying 44 percent more per kilowatt-hour than in 1967. By comparison, Georgia Power's average residential price has risen only 12 percent in the same period, and still is 22 percent below the national average of all investor-owned utilities.

Dependable electric service is vital to your health, your job, your way of living. And you depend on us to provide that service.

We don't like to ask for higher rates. But we would like even less to run out of electricity. We think you would, too.

The Ellis Family was with us at Pineview last Saturday night and they really had some rough weather to contend with! The piano player sure respected that lightning! And who can blame her? Balls of fire were rolling outside the window. I'll tell you I've got all respect for that thunder and lightning too. We enjoyed and appreciated the Ellis Family for braving the weather to be with us.

The regular scheduled sing is to be at the Hahira Church of God this Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. The Georgians are scheduled to be there with the Shilohs and other local singers. Everyone has a special invitation to come and worship in song.

The Shilohs finally visited the studios of W.A.F.T. radio and had the privilege of meeting Mr. and Mrs. Tidwell. We think they're a very dedicated family. While we were there we left a tape we had recorded here at home. If you heard them play it you know it really needed a professional touch, or two! We plan to go to the studio one of these days and Mr. Tidwell is to put his machines to work, along with his talented ability, and tape some songs. I don't know if the singing will be any better or not, they say they can do wonders with the right equipment! We're looking forward to seeing them again anyway. They're doing a great work out there and if you want to make them happy go by and see them or write them a long letter and tell them how much you appreciate their efforts. All the work they do depends on the grace and goodness of the Lord. They donate all their work and live on what the Lord provides. Their faith seems so great compared to mine. You feel at ease the moment you get there. It's such a peaceful place.

There will be a special scheduled sing this Saturday night at the Fellowship Baptist Church. I mentioned the sing a couple of weeks ago in my column to be last Saturday night but the singers couldn't make it and they re-scheduled it for this week. The Humble Hearts of Nashville, Georgia are to be the featured singers with the Youth Choir as Host. The Revelations, and The Joyful Sound will be there also. Gets underway at 8:00 p.m. Go out and support these singers if you're in the area.

There is scheduled to be a big gospel sing in Waycross, Georgia the 23rd of this month, along with a talent contest for amateur gospel singers. I don't know too much about the details yet, but will find out more and pass it along next week. The entry fee is $10.00 I understand, and the winner will win a free album session. I will get the particulars on this and inform you if there are interested contestants.

The Day Family of Valdosta and the Apostles (unknown origin) along with other groups will be the featured singers.

Go out somewhere this week and support gospel music and be in the church of your choice Sunday!

Three lives claimed in crash

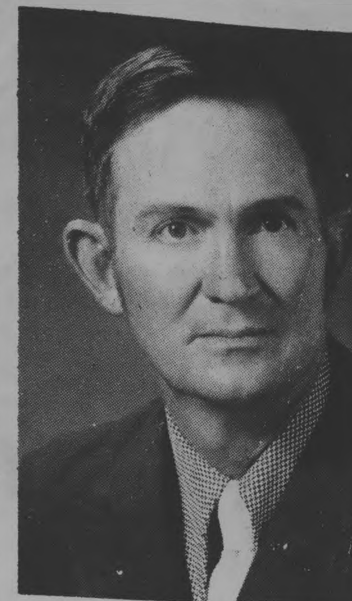

An auto-train crash at the Ousley grade crossing a few miles east of Quitman killed three people from the Ousley community last Sunday at 8:39 p. m. according to the State Patrol.

Berry Andrew Sims, age 38, his son, John Sullivan Sims, 13, of Route 3, Valdosta, and Huger Mason, 21, of Knights Ferry Road were all killed instantly in the tragic accident. Mr. Sims a Lowndes County farmer, was a brother of Mrs. William O. Ley of Quitman. It is reported that Mason was a neighbor of the Sims.

Troopers at the scene of the accident report that Sims, his son and neighbor had gone to some melon fields to look them over and were returning to the Sims' residence, about two miles from the Ousley crossing.

A Seaboard Coastline train struck the 1973 Chevrolet in which they were riding and the car was carried 2,444 down the track before the train could be stopped.

Mr. Sims is survived by his wife, the former Clara Louise Hamilton; three sons, Barry Andrew Sims Jr., Minor David Sims and William Roger Sims, all of Valdosta; his father and stepmother, Mr. and

I REMEMBER

From Margaret H. Russell, Greenville, SC: Our rural mailman did much more than just deliver mail. The roads were mostly unpaved, and in the winter mud and snow he always made it through. We lived on one of these lonely country roads and the sound of his Model T was almost the same at getting company. Regardless of what you were doing, you would pause to see if he stopped at your box. My grandparents lived about ten miles away near the post office. If we had a message to send he would gladly deliver it to them. Many times we rode with him for visits to our grandparents or other friends. If he had the time and if you were near the road, he would pass on news of neighbors along his route. Sometimes we would wait for him if we had some important business to transact, such as buying one-cent postal cards or mailing a package.

CONSUMERS' CORNER

Meats for Outdoor Cookery
Supplies of all meats are not expected to increase much during the summer months and shopping for lower cost items will continue to be a challenge. But, if you are aware of all the meats that can be deliciously prepared outdoors and take advantage of weekly supermarket specials, you can have an enjoyable barbecuing season within the average family budget. Steaks, chops, franks and hamburgers will always be popular outdoor fare, but there are many other meats to choose. Some of these cuts are more costly by the pound, but are good buys on a cost-per-serving basis. For the grill try marinated chuck steak, sausage patties, ham steaks or slices, knockwurst, slices of smoked boneless pork shoulder roll, and thick liver steaks. A grill with a cover will accommodate complete outdoor meals.

window panes due to them being broken out by pranksters. Mr. Titus Bass is to be asked to put panes in and screens on.

Mrs. Bass came and visited with us and we were happy to have her.

The club furnished refreshments prepared by Rudene Vickers and served by Brenda Coombs and LaVerne Webb. LaVerne won the door prize. We are sorry Miss Phelps did not come but she did not notify the president that she would be absent.

Have a nice summer and hope to see you in September.
