General tells of budget schedule

General Telephone Company plans to spend over $20 million in Georgia during 1973 for construction of new telephone facilities.

Edward H. Jared, Vice President for General's Georgia operations, said the Company's 1973 construction budget will exceed $20.5 million.

Jared said that General's budget is primarily aimed at continuation of a program begun in 1969 to eliminate all multi-party service (more than four customers per line) and to establish Direct Distance Dialing (DDD) in all of its 67 Georgia Exchanges.

In General's operating areas, multi-party service has declined from about 17,000 customers having the service in January 1969, to 5,048 in September, 1972, Jared said.

Today, approximately 65,000 of the Company's customers have one-party service, representing 57 percent of about 114,000 customers; only 4.5 percent of the total customers now have multi-party service. The Company plans to eliminate all multi-party lines in its Georgia areas by the middle of 1974.

To complete the elimination of multi-party lines and to establish DDD in Georgia, the Company has allocated over $7.2 million for central office equipment and about $6.6 million for outside cable facilities.

Jared said that by the end of 1973, 68 percent of the exchanges served by the Company will have Direct Distance Dialing and by the end of 1975, the Company will have completed the program for every exchange it serves in Georgia.

During 1973, approximately 22 exchanges will be converted to DDD.

DDD gives the customer the capability of dialing his own long-distance station-to-station calls.

In addition to DDD, other "central office equipment" items include other types of long-distance facilities, swit-

America cries while she weeps

At a time when America cries with joy as the end of a decade of fighting in Viet Nam draws near, this community, state, and nation mourns the death of its' last two surviving former Presidents - Harry S. Truman and Lyndon B. Johnson. The flags of this nation will continue to be flown at half-staff for thirty more days (nearly sixty in all) - possibly one of the longest periods in our history.

Tips for Homemakers

By Ted M. Phelps, Home Economist

SPRING '73 FABRICS
This month ushers in 1973, and it appears to be a happy new year for spring fabric trends. Margie McIntyre, University of Georgia Extension clothing specialist, says the biggest things for spring '73 are color, pattern and texture.

COLORS
There's disagreement among pattern companies on color emphasis. Most agree, however, that white alone or with accents of brown or pastels will be the leading hue.

That's where the agreement ends. Simplicity believes that 99 percent of the fabric sales volume will be in clear, bright colors. But Vogue-Butterick contends pastels will be winners. Miss McIntyre says we'll have to wait and see for ourselves.

In any case, hues to watch are pink (in shades from pale to shocking) and green (from pale to acid). Pink and green are often combined for a new look. Red, white and blue will be accented or combined with acid green to give a new twist to a classic spring color story.

There is no doubt that the uncolor hues—beige, gray and whites—will be big sellers, says the Extension home economist, due to influence of that natural muslin look.

dotted swiss to coin size dots—are in for spring. Good old gingham is teamed with superimposed, often flocked florals. Fine-line plaids also create a background for seasonal floral prints. Story book prints and fairy tale favorites, including Raggedy Ann, are forecasted in prints. Gone are the ecology prints—at least for a while.

SURFACE INTEREST

Texture in the form of nubs, slubs, fuzz and nap is on top of fashion fabric for the coming spring, Miss McIntyre reports. The look of linen has been growing and now is often combined with polyester, cotton and even wool, rendering an especially interesting surface. "Shagbark" fabric has returned to importance.

Really big this spring are cords of all types, twills and seersuckers.

FIBERS

The natural fibers—wool, mohair, silk, cotton and lines—are very prominent. Cottons have never been greater than they will be in spring '73.

RESIDE in the Yellow Pages

Hahira Junior High defeats Lowndes

In a thrilling last-minute finish, the Hahira Junior High School Tigers defeated the Eagles of Lowndes Junior High in their initial basketball game of the year held here last Tuesday afternoon.

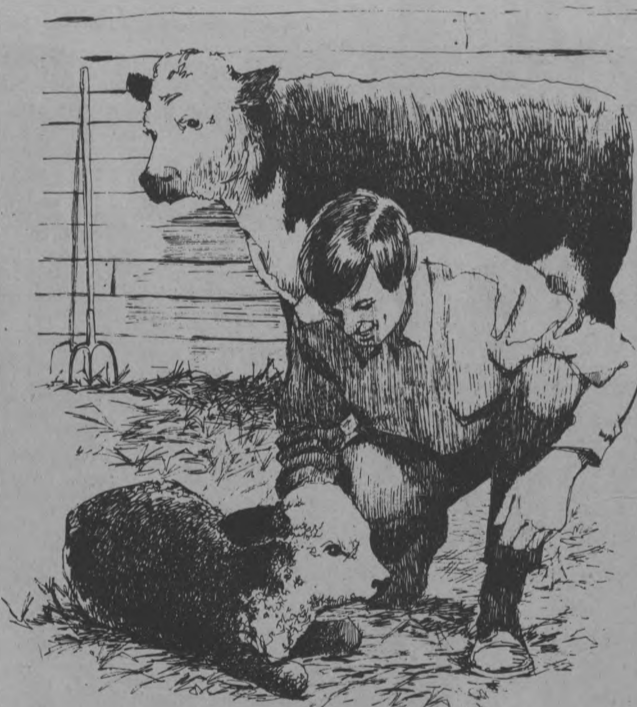

Hahira wasted no time in taking the lead, and at half-time had mounted the score to 23-19. But at the end of a closely-fought third quarter, the scoreboard recorded the Tigers the one-point leader over Lowndes, 35-34.

A tie in the last ten seconds of the game was broken by Andy

Davis with a heroic effort from 30 or 40 feet away which pulled Hahira to victory by a 44-42 score over Lowndes.

Bob West was high scorer with 11 points, and Andy Davis second highest with 10, while Lowndes' high scorers were Zanders with 13 and McLeod, 13.

The next opponent Hahira Junior High School will face will be the Brooks County team, and the battle will be decided on the home court on Saturday, January 20, at 3 p.m.

Some of our work includes more than power generation.

It includes the younger generation.

Somewhere near Monticello, a young 4-H member learns what it takes to raise a sturdy calf. A future homemaker in Pelham perfects her canning skills.

Both projects are part of Georgia Power's work to help cultivate the enterprise and skills of the state's young people. The projects are varied. From a Youth Conference on Science and the Environment to music scholarships. Some programs carry over from our first year in business, 1927. Others are initiated annually.

Last year the programs collectively won Edison Electric Institute's youth education award. Selected from 221 entries.

Our business is supplying power. But we take a special interest in people, too. Kids, especially.

Charley Pride went back onstage, and he and Waylon sang a duet!! I haven't been able to remember what they sang, but the fans responded enthusiastically. Then they called Jessie Colter (Mrs. Waylon Jennings) on stage, and the three of them did a trio number!!! Mind you, there was only a handful of fans left in the building, and here were these super-stars putting on a show like there were thousands there!! You'll see pictures of all of these performances on the photo page -- thanks to Jan O'Hare, who took the pictures, and supplied them for us to use. Thanks also to Jean Osborn and Ethel Delaney for pictures they've sent of convention, as well as Ethel Mengee, of Mountain Records.

On Wednesday the Hospitality Suite was open early, and visiting continued until time for the noon luncheon. This was a new venture this year, for the purpose of providing extra activities for the fans who were in Nashville, and not permitted to attend any of the WSM activities. Doyle Holly and his band provided the entertainment, which had to be cut short because they were scheduled for rehearsal of the Barnaby Record Show at 2. The Hotel service was slow in getting things set up for the luncheon, so time was even shorter than ever, but after the guests were introduced, Doyle took over and did a fine job of pleasing the crowd with his latest record release on Barnaby, plus some other numbers, then presented the Haggers, Jim and John, Connie Van Dyke, and Steve Norman, all of Barnaby Records. Doyle's bass man, who I believe was named Austin Lee, did a Merle Haggard song, and Ethel Delaney was called on to contribute to the show -- which she is always ready to do!

When time made it necessary for Doyle and the band to leave, he apologized and they gathered the instruments up and left quietly, while the rest of us were listening to some very interesting talks by Johnny Henderson and Gene Bear. The hectic schedule of convention often disrupts the best of plans, and Doyle felt badly about having to cut the entertainment short, but of course we understand, and were glad to have him there for even a little while.

Thought For Food

In 1985, according to some economists, consumer expenditures will have increased in the following amounts over what we're paying today: food and beverages, 79 percent; personal and medical care, 185 percent; housing, 172 percent; recreation and education, 149 percent; household operation and furnishings, 110 percent; transportation, 107 percent and clothing, 95 percent. These predictions are based on a corollary forecast that all Americans will be receiving equivalent higher incomes.

The increasing number of wives who work away from home has influenced American living patterns in many ways. For instance, the tremendous growth of the food service industry is due in part to working wives. Not only do they patronize restaurants, tea rooms and hot dog stands during lunch hour, but their influence is responsible for more family eating out at the end of a busy day.

Veterinarians tackle waste problem

ATHENS—The problem of food waste in America and the damage it is causing to the environment may have been solved by two University of Georgia veterinarians.

Dr. Charles N. Dobbins Jr. and Dr. Thomas W. Powell have developed a process for converting garbage (edible food waste) into a safe, nutritious, palatable livestock feed ingredient. They are calling the product "Biomeal."

The developers say the process will also help eliminate sources of animal diseases—especially hog cholera.

(Dr. Dobbins is head of the Cooperative Extension Service veterinary department and Dr. Powell is Extension veterinarian at the University's College of Agriculture in Athens.) Biomeal, derived entirely from food waste, is high in protein and fat and low in fiber content.

The product's nutritive value has been proved in feeding trials with poultry. Livestock, pets and horses eat the material straight, and Dr. Dobbins says this "pretty well proves its palatability."

The scientists emphasize that Biomeal is not a complete feed ration. Neither is it a supplement or a feed additive. Instead, it is a feed ingredient, the same as corn, soybeans and other protein and energy sources.

But the ecological benefits of Biomeal—because of the unique manufacturing process—may outweigh its value as a livestock feed.

The process removes a portion of the fats and oils from garbage, reduces moisture content from approximately 75 percent to about 10 percent, and kills any pathogenic organisms which might be present. The operation is virtually pollution free; the only thing left is a small amount of free water.

The process was proved feasible and economical through operation of a pilot plant at the huge military installation at Fort Benning, near Columbus.

For every ton of dry matter produced, there are 300 to 400 pounds of fats and oils which may also be used in livestock feed.

Biomeal can be produced economically if the raw material is picked up within a 30-mile radius. Dr. Dobbins and Dr. Powell say food waste recycling is more economical than most recycling—paper, glass, metal, etc.—provided food waste is separated at the point of origin.

The process is presently

designed to utilize food waste from any type of mass feeding—military posts, government installations, schools, hospitals or restaurants. The developers say it may be adapted later for use in apartment buildings and individual homes. Dr. Dobbins and Dr. Powell have developed a unique collection system which they believe is the key to their process.

By utilizing an odorless, sanitary container, garbage may be accumulated for an extended period of time. The container, which holds three to five cubic yards, may be modified to drain off excess water into the sewer and thus increase storage capacity.

A positive air pressure flow system helps empty the container, and one man can load five cubic yards of garbage in five minutes simply by connecting a pipe and pushing a button. The container overcomes the cost of daily garbage pickup, according to Dr. Dobbins and Dr. Powell.

The traditional method of disposing of garbage—feeding it to swine—became illegal in Georgia on January 1.

Disposals serve only to relocate garbage and further clog already overtaxed sewer systems.

Sanitary landfills offer only a temporary answer at best. Besides being expensive and consuming valuable land, landfills may contribute to pollution of surface and subsurface water. Some have been found to work like trench silos, preserving food wastes for years and compounding fly, roach and rat problems.

Dr. Dobbins and Dr. Powell felt that a process whereby food waste could be economically changed into a feed ingredient for recycling through livestock and poultry would relieve some of the pressure.

They began their work more than three years ago, using their wives' kitchen stoves and ovens for laboratories. "All we came up with was a glob, just greasy gunk," said Dr. Powell, "and a lot of 'no' answers."

From the kitchen the veterinarians moved to Central State Hospital at Milledgeville where they used an old abandoned abattoir and continued their work in cooperation with the State Health Department. Here they came up with more "no" answers and learned, among other things, that normal rendering techniques serve only to homogenize the fat in edible food waste.

With approval of the Pentagon, they began putting their pilot plant together at Fort Benning a little more than a year ago. Here they further developed the recycling project which takes edible food waste and converts it into a valuable feed ingredient.

General tells ching equipment for local calling and inter-exchange calling circuits.

In the budget for outside cable facilities, General Telephone has a program to eliminate outside "open wire" and to replace it with lines sheathed in cable; the Company also plans to place as much cable as possible underground.

At the end of 1969, the Company had 7,500 miles of "open wire" facilities, 3,500 miles of sheath cable, and 3,800 miles of underground cable.

"This mix has been drastically changed and at the end of 1971, open wire was reduced by 25 percent, leaving 5,600 miles in existence. Cable lines have been increased by 23 percent to over 4,300 miles.

"Underground cable facilities have been increased 47 percent and we now have 5,600 miles of underground cable in service," Jared said.

The Georgia phone executive said sheath cable provides an improved quality of telephone service. He said underground cable was less vulnerable to the hazards of bad weather and vehicle accidents and helped improve the attractiveness of neighborhoods and roads.

General's 1973 budget calls for expenditures of about $4.6 million for telephone instruments, and for the lines that connect the telephones with the cables on the streets and highways.

Over $840,000 has been set aside for construction of new central offices and additions to central offices and other necessary buildings.

In 1973, construction of new buildings will be completed in Abbeville, Dalton, Edison, Morven, Parrott and Shellman. General plans to spend about $1.3 million in 1973 for replacement of vehicles and tools.

Concerning General's 1973 budget, Jared said, "we plan to continue our multi-party service elimination program to its completion along with the provision of sufficient telephone facilities to serve our customers' needs when and wherever they occur."

The phone executive said General Telephone had expended over $23 million in 1972 for new telephone facilities, and said that for the period 1972-1976 General Telephone has projected gross expenditures in the range of $100 million.

"These dollars represent our commitment to continue improving and expanding telephone service to meet the growing needs throughout Georgia in 1973 and during the months and years that follow."

In 1973, General Telephone's budget calls for an average gross expenditure of over $179 per customer.

Plans for construction of new facilities in the Company's Moultrie District will require expenditures in excess of $2 million according to J. S. Livingston, District Manager.

Livingston said a large portion of that total will be required for the completion of projects to establish DDD in 8 of the 19 exchanges in the Moultrie District.

"The installation of DDD equipment has already begun," the district manager noted. "Our present schedule calls for customers in Moultrie, Funston, Norman Park and Berlin to begin receiving DDD service

Social Security

U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

People who don't have the medical insurance part of Medicare because they didn't enroll during the first 3 years they were eligible now have a new chance to enroll.

Previously you had to sign up in an enrollment period that began within 3 years after you became eligible for the medical insurance—or within 3 years after your protection stopped because you cancelled. The 3-year deadline is eliminated by the new law.

These people now can sign up for medical insurance in any general enrollment period—January, February, and March of every year.

The basic premium is now $5.80 a month. But the monthly premium increases by 10 percent for every 12 month period you could have been enrolled but weren't.

Under the new law, disabled people newly eligible for Medicare benefits and almost everyone who reaches age 65 after June 1973 will automatically be enrolled for the medical insurance part of Medicare unless they say they don't want it.

If they do decline the protection and later decide they want it, they can enroll at any social security office during the first 3 months of any year.

The medical insurance part of Medicare helps pay for doctor bills and other medical services. It is funded by individual premiums and general revenues of the Federal Government. Medicare is administered by the Social Security Administration of the
