Hahira, Georgia Power man helps

'tame tiger' in Atlanta

Gene Ivey, local Georgia Power employee, was among the crew from this area working in Atlanta to restore operations during the ice storm last week. Ivey left Hahira Thursday and returned home Monday.

By Paul Darcy Boles

It's Sunday, January 7, 1973.

Moist warm air is blowing into Atlanta out of the Gulf. At the same time, dry cold air is flowing like a giant river out of the north. They meet, and the ice storm prowls through the city like a white tiger. It has claws of raking strength, dragging down thousands of giant trees, which in turn bring down thousands of power lines. The city is devastated, ice-bombed. And 150,000 families are without heat and light, in bitter, paralyzing weather.

It's a storm 120 miles wide, with Atlanta at the center. The ice accumulation is one-half to one-inch thick. It's the "most destructive ice storm Atlanta has ever had from the standpoint of its impact on the people," according to the U. S. Weather Bureau.

The Ominous Signs

Georgia Power's storm center (Emergency Operations) set up long ago to assume statewide responsibility in the teeth of any natural disaster, is moving even while the first crystals are forming on bird feeders; while the first twigs are being wrapped with their first sheathes of ice. Even while these signs, unnoticed by many, are there to be read, orders are going out from storm center headquarters. The orders are to alert all crews south of Macon. This is a gamble; the storm may not develop. But it's a shrewd gamble, turning out to be the first step in a giant continuous operation which, by dark Sunday, has defined the storm area, and has started pulling in trained crews from Waycross, Valdosta, Columbus; making detailed arrangements for them to come in from out of state, to be flown in, drive the trucks in. The tiger is relentless. It must be tamed.

Manpower by the Hour

Its strength is assessed by the hour, even by the minute. And the teamwork clicks, and the manpower rushes in, and keeps on coming, around the clock in the deepfreeze weather. It keeps coming, smoothly coordinated, because as long as eight years ago, field operations were established by Georgia Power in seven centers: Tucker, Buckhead, North Shallowford, West, South, Candler Road, and Central. And the men working out of these centers know their areas the way Mark Twain knew the Mississippi. Emergency Operations knows how to move these men and to keep adding more, with crews in the days to come pouring in from Alabama, Mississippi, North and even South Florida. Pickup crews, contracted-for crews, tree-cutting crews.

Time and Punishment

Skill is all-important. Simple numbers won't do it. This is hazardous work, highly technical. Training is vital. And the whole job has to be done in sequence, a step at a time, starting at the substations, restoring primary feeders, taking taps off the feeders, then moving to the secondary feeders, and finally distributing power to homes. This is the only way to restore service to the greatest number of people in the shortest time. A hundred incidental jobs hang upon the gathering together and the motion of every crew. Truckdrivers and storekeepers and auditors have to be called in. The trucks have to be gassed up, the materials have to be gathered, the crews have to be fed and housed. It's a logistics problem worth the skill of a George Marshall, a Patton. It's war to the hilt, but a planned war, a war in which every gear has to mesh with another for maximum effect. Time is the enemy. Time, the stretchable quan-

Mrs. Reddy heads State Cosmetology Board

Mrs. Ruth Reddy was elected chairman of the Georgia State Board of Cosmetology at the first meeting held in January.

The office was held by the late Mrs. Marion Richardson of Tucker, who passed away December 28.

Mrs. Reddy has been serving on the State Board since 1967 and attends the meetings regularly in Atlanta. A well-known hairdresser in this area, Mrs. Reddy and her partner, Mrs. Louise Varn, have operated a beauty salon here since 1939.

Fire department responds to school fire

The local volunteer fire department answered an alarm to extinguish a minor fire at the Hahira Junior High School at 11:20 Monday morning, according to Bob Yanconish, Fire Chief.

According to Yanconish a small trash fire was extinguished under the northwest corner of the old section of the school building.

The building was vacated for about forty-five minutes while the fire was being extinguished.

Atlanta storm

tivity - time not even recorded on clocks, but seeming to compress hours into minutes for those waiting for heat, for light. And in the disaster plan for Georgia Power's Emergency Operations there are priorities, the real emergency needs. Hospitals, pumping stations, nursing homes, kidney patients requiring power to run dialysis machines, the elderly who cannot move, the babies, the infirm who must have heat. Crews literally "bust a gut" to meet these needs.

Against the Icy Odds

By Wednesday morning there are 149 Georgia Power crews in the field, 1,106 men against all the icy odds. And they're augmented by 410 more men from contractor crews, 131 men from other power companies. So by this time there are 1,647 men battling in the stricken city, fighting the tiger and steadily winning. They're all in the Atlanta area by midday Wednesday.

And by Thursday morning the seven headquarters of Emergency Operations control in excess of 300 crews, which means crews with about 600 pieces of equipment. Each crew has a bucket truck and a big truck and in many cases a light truck as well. Only 60 percent of these crews are from Georgia Power. The remainder are from Alabama Power, Gulf Power, Florida Power, Florida Power & Light, Tampa Electric, Ballinger, Pike, Boulingny, Rabey Electric, Knoxville Utilities. They represent unstinting, ongoing investment, investment in the millions. And they represent selectivity. The judgment of management, long geared for statewide emergency, in picking manpower without dissipating it. The cool head and the warm heart. The dynamic ability to guide a plan with confidence and competence, charged with responsibility and able to carry it out all the way.

Telephones and Tree-trimming

Georgia Power's sales staff mans telephones. Other parts of the staff are diverted to serve as guides to incoming crews who don't know the system. Still others serve as messengers and message-carriers because out-of-town trucks have radios set on frequencies other than those used in metropolitan Atlanta. The incoming crews, reporting to the general service headquarters in Forest Park, are then directed to one or another of the operating headquarters to go to work.

Tree-trimming crews, Asplundh, Gilbert, Farrens, Davey, some from Utilities Construction and Knoxville Utilities, also moving into Atlanta from all points, and in all cases representing the best manpower available, have to clear street after street, yard after yard.

Appreciation - and Questions

And by Friday morning it's plain. The tiger is being beaten. The ice is still there. But out of 150,000 customers without power on Monday morning, there are now only 35,000 out-of-service customers remaining, and the work crews are fighting through to them, taking everything in the only logical way, the fastest way, step by step and point by point. In an industry which has, to say the least, a high visibility for criticism, the vast volume of comment has been a great flood of praise for Georgia Power. The main body of objection has said, "Why don't you put all the wires underground?" or "Why do you seem to restore service to commercial establishments first?"

Underground wires, a very recently developed art in the industry, have, of course, been used in recent installations. But on a mass distribution basis they would cost from $2½ to $3 billion to install in the metropolitan Atlanta area. So besides the long, massively expensive "tearing up" process, there's the simple fact that Georgia Power's total plant investment is now about $2 billion, which would mean rates would have to be about twice what they are now to justify the whole undergrounding operation.

And, in general, commercial establishments happen to come "first" because they're located on the main feeder lines, the first points which have to be restored before the whole system can come back to service.

The Whole Picture

Now, on Friday, look at the whole picture. See the storm, the tiger in fury, striking on that first Sunday night; see it, known now to be even worse in intensity than the one which hit 20 counties in North-west Georgia in 1960, swiftly assessed, defined, and attacked; attacked by plans that were in operation well before 1960. See the continuing evaluation, and the ability to make the right, pre-planned moves, go straight through until now. See this utility in constant touch with its counterparts in other utilities, and with the common sense and calm and know-how to ride with the punches; to face the tiger in its lair, and to back it up, with heat and lights coming on in home after home throughout greater Atlanta. See the wonderful patience and understanding of customers meet the steady and valiant efforts of power crewmen halfway. Hear the summing up of men who have been in this business, basically that of serving the public, for generations: "I never saw a group more dedicated to those they tried to serve. I never saw people who responded more in crisis, or who got more satisfaction out of helping others."

The tiger is not dead. But it is limping, teeth drawn, claws blunted.

Friday, January 12. Nearly all service will be restored before the ice melts.

The tiger is tamed.

Social Security

About 150,000 retired workers and their families will get higher social security payments starting in 1973 under a special minimum benefit provision of the new social security law.

People who worked over 20 years in jobs covered by social security, but had relatively low annual earnings, may be helped by the special minimum provision.

The special minimum benefit ranges up to $170 a month for workers who retire at 65 with 30 or more years of coverage under social security. A couple can get up to $255. Benefits for people who apply before 65 will be reduced because the benefits will be paid for a longer time.

The new provision is effective January 1973.

Retired people who will get a benefit increase under the new law don't have to apply for it. The increase will be paid starting with checks delivered in early April.

People already getting more than the special minimum will continue to get their regular checks.

Additional benefits to be paid under the new provision will amount to about $18 million in 1973 and $20 million in 1974.

Methodist planning Human Relations Day

Financial support of a wide variety of projects designed to help ethnic and minority groups help themselves is the object of a special offering to be received for the first time in United Methodist churches in Georgia and across the nation in late January.

Known as Human Relations Day, the observance was set up by the 1972 General Conference of the denomination. Goal of this year's offering on January 28 is $1 million.

In addition to the offering, Human Relations Day is designed to prompt an examination of attitudes, recognize contributions of the various groups to each other, and call attention to the fact that the denomination is made up of many racially, ethnically and culturally diverse groups.

The special offering will help support four programs specifically: Voluntary Service Program; Community Developers; Police-Community Relations Program and training of American Indians, Hispanic Americans and Asian Americans.

These programs are not super-imposed ones from general agencies of the church, but are centered within the ethnic groups, and grow out of self-initiation. Thus, through these programs minority groups will develop projects to meet their own needs.

In a general way, Human Relations Day supplants the former Race Relations Day in the denomination. The offering received on Race Relations Day went to support black colleges. Beginning in 1973 there is a Black College Fund apportioned to the local churches.

I REMEMBER

From John A. McKelvey, Phoenix, Ariz.: I was born on a farm near Coulterville, Illinois, sixty miles south of St. Louis in 1900. In 1904 there was a World's Fair held in St. Louis. That summer my family attended the Fair and since I was only three at the time I was left with an aunt in Coulterville. My two brothers were 16 and 10 that year. I was used to being with them so my staying there didn't present too many problems and I did behave well. The main reason was the threat of what a large dog, which was a member of their family, might do to me if I didn't behave. I do not know what kind of dog he was, but he sure looked like a monster to me. He was large enough to pull several children in a wagon with the special harness they had made for him. We sure enjoyed the ride, although sometimes it got a little rough when a cat appeared on the scene. I always loved to hear my mother tell of the wonderful things they saw at that fair. Thirty years later we were living in Chicago and my mother was able to visit us and attend the "Century of Progress Exposition" in that city.

LIVING- AS YOU LIKE IT

...and get more from the GOOD YEARS

A friend, recently retired, doesn't really need the money, yet keeps busy with a variety of part-time jobs . . . noon time cashier in a restaurant, parking lot attendant, movie theater usher. He says he could find more jobs if he wanted them.

Part-time employees are often in demand by one-man operations and by firms which have peak customer hours. Some of these firms also just like to have someone they can call upon when sickness or some temporary personal emergency requires that some one "fill in" for the boss or a regular employee who needs to be temporarily absent.

The moral, I suppose, is that those who are interested in part-time employment should impress upon potential employers the value of "availability." Retired people do not have full-time obligations and can come "on call" and on short notice.

If you need part-time work, make your availability known to various businesses in your community — restaurants, theaters, supermarkets, parking lots. If you get the call for "an hour or two" don't say "it isn't worth the bother" and forget it. An hour or two today may lead to a regular assignment tomorrow.

In your community are a number of firms which need part-time help. Nearly everyone of them will be happy to have your name on file and know that you can come when they have some temporary emergency.

Cancer victims

Eight names added memorial plaque in '72

VALDOSTA, Ga. -- Eight names were added to the memorial plaque of the American Cancer Society's Lowndes County Unit at South Georgia Medical Center in 1972. Honored on the plaque are the late Dr. Bingly Burdick, Mrs. Charles DeVane, Mrs. Evelyn Keef, Mrs. Helen Kilcullen, Mrs. James L. Noell, Miss Elizabeth Marangos, Mr. Goss Rice and Mrs. W. C. Whitaker. All were cancer victims and all were residents of the Lowndes County area, according to Mrs. M. W. Ashurst, chairman of the unit's memorial program. "Though 70 Lowndes Counties were killed by cancer in 1972, these eight names are listed on the plaque at the hospital because each was remembered by memorial gifts of at least $100 to the American Cancer Society," Mrs. Ashurst said. Funds realized from ASC memorial gifts go to relieve the suffering of cancer victims through the Service-Rehabilitation Program of the Society. Some of the money goes to research, Mrs. Ashurst added. Memorial donations may be made to Mrs. Ashurst in care of Lowndes County Unit, American Cancer Society, P. O. Box 565, Valdosta, Ga.

"The donor will receive a receipt, the family of the honored victim will receive notification of the gift and a record of the donation is made in the local ACS office," Mrs. Ashurst said. "And all gifts to ACS are tax deductible. One out of every four residents of Lowndes County will have cancer some time in their lifetime, according to ACS projection. Based on current population, this amounts to approximately 13,750, Mrs. Ashurst added.

The number of people living on farms has been dwindling steadily for several years. For that matter, so has the number of farms. In fact, the United States currently is losing farms at the rate of 123 a day. Only 2.83 million farms are now in operation in the country. This is down nearly a million from the 3.7 million farms just ten years ago.

4-H NEWS

By Mrs. Sally Black and R. Douglas Durham

LJHS 4-H holds meeting

Beth Vann, Reporter
At the last 4-H meeting held on January 9, 1973, the meeting was called to order by Cheryl Nichols, President of our club. We were asked to stand and pledge to the U. S. Flag and to the 4-H Flag.
Then Varina Zipperer told what we did at the last County Council meeting held on January 4. Lynn Thompson reported to the club about decorating the Christmas Tree on the courthouse lawn in December. Varina Zipperer told about the Salvation Army and what we did to help them.

After the officers finished we turned the meeting over to Mr. Durham and Mrs. Black and we saw a film on National 4-H Congress held in Chicago. We found that it would be very interesting to to to National Congress. Everyone enjoyed the film. After the film, Mr. Durham and Mrs. Black passed out newsletters. The meeting was then adjourned.

about 135 4-H members and leaders participated in 4-H officer's Training held at the High last Saturday. County Council president Linda Flynt opened the meeting and Varina Zipperer gave the invocation.
Members then attended training sessions on the 4-H. Mrs. Sandra Flynt, Tommy Mas and Mitchell Hesters taught the club presidents and parliamentarians; Johnnie Lou Apolski, Terri Jones and Ivey Zipperer were in charge of vice presidents; and Fonda Moore and Elaine Sims instructed club secretaries. Reporters were taught by Remonda Stephens and recreation and song leaders were instructed by Randy Jones, Gwen Cowart and Barbara Cargile.

Tips for Homemakers

By Ted M. Phelps, Home Economist

Home Sewing Upswing:

Home sewing, contrary to what many think, is not a lost art. Thousands of women, and men too, are learning sewing skills. And they're not simply learning the basic "how to's" of sewing.

Today's seamstresses and seamsters are well informed about fabrics and finishes. They can put it all together and come out with a superior finished product.

Today, according to the University of Georgia Extension Service, there exists something called sociopsychological aspects of clothing -- how to dress and make clothes work for you. Extension clothing specialists have developed programs in Georgia to foster the movement of home sewing.

"The-point-of-sale" -- that's where Georgians want educational information. A program called "Knit-Knack" takes knit sewing techniques to the fabric shops, department stores or shopping centers around the state.

Trained clothing experts provide take-home educational materials which complement training sessions. At home, the sewing student has a handy reference.

Over 5,000 women have been contacted through "Knit-Knack." More than 75,000 bulletins were distributed on sewing in one three-month period.

Spices and Herbs:

Even a novice cook can enjoy using these tasty condiments. Spices, usually of tropical origin, are parts of plants -- dried seeds, buds, fruit or flower parts, bark or roots of plants. Herbs come from the leafy parts of temperature-zone plants.

Both are sold in whole or ground form. To get quality seasonings, good color is an important consideration. A rich color indicates strength and quality of flavor. Don't purchase in quantity for herbs and spices because they lose flavor and color during storage. University of Georgia Extension home economists suggest storing spices and herbs in a cool, dry place in airtight containers.

Under favorable conditions, ground spices will retain maximum aroma and flavor up to six months; whole spices keep flavor almost indefinitely. Herbs tend to lose flavor more rapidly than ground pepper, ginger, cinnamon and cloves. However, herbs, properly stored, will retain flavor and color several months.

Ground spices flavor food immediately. Add them to your recipe about 15 minutes before the end of the cooking period. Whole spices tied in a cheesecloth for easy removal, are best in slow cooking dishes such as stews.

A long simmering period extracts the full flavor and aroma. Whole or leaf herbs should be crumbled finely just before using in order to fully release their flavor.

If you don't normally use these seasonings, give it a try. A touch of herbs or spices will transform an ordinary meal into a delightful treat.

Most of your phone system is invisible. However, your phone company is not.

You never see the complicated electro-mechanical gear that makes your phone work. For example, we have machines that periodically check every line.

They look for trouble even when there isn't any. It's one form of automated preventive medicine we use to keep your phone ready to use when you need it.

But, even these intricate systems of lines and devices are just a part of our operation.

We're mainly people. Thousands of us dedicated to service. For every one of us that you see there are 8 others doing the behind-the-scene jobs that keep your phone buzzing.

We are all committed to our "One-to-One" service policy. So, even though you may not see us all face to face doesn't mean we can't deal with each other one to one.
