Hold on for that college degree

Kate Gauling
Staff Writer

A reporter once asked Bob Dylan what he learned while he attended college. Dylan, living up to his witty reputation, replied, "I learned that a lot of people go to college." At least that's how my parents remember the quote.

When my parents attended college, while the Vietnam War was still raging, many people went to college. For many men who wanted to avoid the draft, it was a must. Some male students were passed by professors just to miss the draft.

There is a war going on today and a military draft, but things are different. Still it seems to be popular trend to attend college. A college degree has become a necessity in the work force. Most people seem lost without it.

Lately however, students around campus don't seem to enjoy being here. Morale is low.

Some students never finish homework, some never read assignments and some rarely go to class. Yet like those students avoiding the 60's draft, they expect passing grades.

Professors are not here for that.

Of course students disregard some college assignments, procrastinate here and there, and question the relevancy of an analytical paper ( Like when in the real world is this crap going to help me or anyone else?)

In the end, though, it's not about those mathematical equations that will never be used after graduation day. It's not about those lengthy, unfathomable papers that aren't finished until the break of dawn (At that moment when they seem a work of genius).

In the end, it's about the degree. When the pencil is dropped or the mind wanders, think of the degree. Use sticky notes as assignment reminders. Take notes. Organize notebooks. Practice presentations. Edit essays and analytical papers, even if no one else sees it.

And when losing touch with reality, go out with friends, call someone or turn on the television. Then remember the real world outside of VSU. Imagine job interviews, medical plans, decent paychecks, paid vacations, a dependable car, a nice house and especially, though it's far away, retirement. That is what all this 'crap' is for.

Dylan was right. A lot of students do go to college. Some are avoiding things; a parent's disappointment, a military draft or future uncertainty. Some are just making a stop. No matter what the reason for attending VSU, the degree is there, sitting on a bench -- waving, smiling and daring students to achieve it. Just remember to reach for it. Hold on.

YESSSS!!!!!!

The word that every student will utter come May 7. This is the day when graduates finally get the piece of paper that unlocks the door to bigger and better things. This is also the day when every student will relish the fact that summer is officially here.

The staff of the Spectator wants to wish all grads good luck in their future endeavours. This tab celebrates our grads and provides those of us left behind with some memories and information.

So enjoy! And if you're still around May 10, pick up the summer edition of the Spectator. We'll have tons of information for the next year and feature stories on topics like seances and online therapy. And if you're not here, check us out on the web!

Get rid of the summertime boredom blues

Tara Sherman
Staff Writer

So you told your parents you want to stay here this time. None of your friends have stuck around back home and no one's left to play with. Yet in the back of your mind you're scared that you'll get bored quickly during the Valdosta summer. Chances are you probably will, but here's a few ideas in case of an emergency.

If you're the outdoorsy type, try camping. Check out Paradise Island if you're looking for a chance to chill... but not literally, in this time of year.

Some other outdoor luxuries are swimming, volleyball, fishing and Wild Adventures. Some indoor luxuries you could enjoy:

bowling, shopping at the Colonial mall or Sojourner's for some new foreign coffee bean in stock.

Another suggestion is to find a job to back up your endless summer a little. Work at the library or at a gas station. Enjoy the school sabbatical if you're not enrolled this summer and relieve some stress.

You've got to do something to keep you sane in Valdosta. Of course, if you prefer hibernation during those three months, take the opportunity to snooze. Just be sure to set your alarm for mid-August.
