Peggy,

What would it take to provide a 12-month payout for 10-month faculty? Is this something the Faculty Senate could work on or is there another route?

RE: Establishing VSU-wide Recognition Award for Outstanding Services by Adjunct or Visiting Faculty

August 9, 2011

Dear Professor Woodard-Meyers:

It has been brought to my attention that VSU does not have established university-wide policy on recognizing an outstanding service performed by adjunct professors. The purpose of my letter to you as VSU Faculty Senate Executive Secretary is to put forward under the Senate consideration the installation of such a policy in the form of annual Recognition Award for Outstanding Services to VSU by Adjunct and Visiting Faculty.

I have been prompted into action by my recent futile search for possible venues of recognition for Dr. Karen Baskin, who is the adjunct professor at the Department of Physics, Astronomy and GeoScience. I am bringing her case as a representative example of the type of service to VSU that needs to be appreciated and recognized.

Dr. K. Baskin teaches Integrated Science classes at VSU. As an experienced educator with a great passion for teaching, she took upon her own initiative to develop the Integrated Science curriculum as an experiential learning. In the recent decade the experiential learning has become a fashionable style of delivering science and technology subjects at popular level to non-science majors. While there is a general agreement in physics-teaching community on educational benefits coming from experiential learning strategies, this method of lecture delivering is not as often encountered at college-level instruction as its popularity would suggest. One of the reasons for this gap between the yield of the ideal delivery method and the actual classroom practice is an enormous time expenditure that must be done in order to organize and build demonstration infrastructure and to correctly pace course contents. Accordingly, this high-quality content development goes far beyond the common scope of instructional responsibilities and is not expected from adjunct faculty. But when it happens such a unique and exemplary work should be appreciated and recognized as the passion and devotion are priceless.

In long-time perspective the ultimate benefits from establishing Recognition Award for Outstanding Services by Adjunct or Visiting Faculty are to VSU as educational institution. A desired increase in the student enrollment will demand a future increase in new hires. Having additional employment incentives set in place in addition to the usual offerings instituted at other universities, will ultimately make VSU more competitive in attracting high-quality and motivated part-time instructors and limited-term visitors.

Subject: Early Alert programs
Hi Tracy,

Eric Nielson suggested I contact you about the following issue we'd like the senate's help with:

a team of people and I have been considering early alert programs to help with retention. Apparently, athletics has one in place already, but the team of people I gathered--from Sheri Gravett to Stanley Jones to Tom Hardy in Housing--would like to know how we can effectively use one of these programs for the whole university.

We'd appreciate some help from a senate committee. It seems that the system Athletics has wasn't vetted much outside of their department. Perhaps there was timing issue. These early alert programs are a lot of work for IT--as demonstrated by DegreeWorks and GradesFirst, which is the program Athletics chose and funded. Both programs have glitches, and there are confidentiality issues that also make things complicated on the IT end of the spectrum. Sometimes these sales representatives don't seem to know how much has to go on for IT to make things work. I've been in contact with Bobby Tucker about how GradesFirst is working for Athletics, and Lisa Baldwin in IT so that there's a good bit of transparency in our communications about the issue.

The programs we are looking at are:

Map-Works
GradesFirst
StarFish

I have a sample of the Map-Works demo, and I participated in a GradesFirst demo yesterday afternoon. Jon Sizemore just invited me to see a Starfish demo. That will have to wait until the first week of classes for me. I can put together some kind of comparison chart of the three systems, but I'd like to get it out to as many folks on campus as possible, including the Student Affairs side of the house.

Any advice you can offer will help!

Thank you,
Chere

ATTACHMENT F:

Tracy,

Could we get the following item sent to education policies for review:

The Office of Admissions requests that VSU change its admission standard to require a total SAT score of 900 (reading and mathematics). Each subscore would still have to meet the BOR minimum (reading=430 and math=400). The current admission standard is reading=440 and math=410 for a total of 850. The Freshmen Index requirement would remain unchanged at 2040.

We hope to get a vote on this item by the October Senate meeting. I would like to introduce this item in my opening comments at the September meeting and then I hope you will assign it to committee under new business.

Thanks.

ATTACHMENT G: HOW THE VSU SENATE WORKS

<http://www.valdosta.edu/facsen/>

The Senate serves as the mechanism for shared governance at Valdosta State University (Statutes: Chapter 4, Article I -- <http://www.valdosta.edu/legal/statutes.shtml>).

What the Senate does is to formulate university policy. This is an extremely important function, central to the vitality of VSU. In the words of the Statutes, the Senate functions as the representative, deliberative, advisory, and legislative body of the General Faculty.

It includes 56 elected faculty senators (voting), 14 ex officio administrator senators (voting), staff participants (non-voting), and student participants (non-voting).

Any faculty member, administrator, staff member, or student can submit an issue for Senate consideration. It must be submitted in writing to the Executive Secretary. [Currently, B.J. Rickman, bjrickma@valdosta.edu], who brings it to the Executive Committee of the Senate. It is strongly recommended that anyone raising an item for the Executive Committee make their report thorough and well-researched. The Executive Secretary is not expected to do any supplemental research or work on your report or item.

The Executive Committee serves as a traffic cop, deciding whether an issue goes to the Senate, and if so, which committee is the appropriate committee to consider an issue.

There are three (3) kinds of Senate committees: statutory committees, standing committees, and special committees. Membership on all committees is either by election or by recommendation of the Committee on Committees to the Senate and the President for approval.

The five (5) statutory committees are permanently established by the Statutes. They are major committees - Academic Committee, Committee on Committees, Faculty Affairs Committee, Institutional Planning Committee, and Faculty Grievance Committee. Their chairs, the President, and the Executive Secretary form the Executive Committee.

Standing committees are formed by the Senate, renewable for three-year periods. They are listed in the Bylaws of the Faculty Senate <http://www.valdosta.edu/facsen/documents/bylaws2008.pdf>. Standing committees may form subcommittees. Special committees are formed by the Senate, normally for one year.

Senate committees can initiate policy recommendations within their committee. Senate committees do not have to wait for items to be submitted to them by the Executive Committee. (Statutes: Chapter 4, Article VI, Section 3).

Committees make recommendations to the full Senate. The Senate then considers the matter (time limit: 30 minutes). It may accept the recommendation, amend it, or remand the matter back to the appropriate committee. If the Senate adopts a recommendation, the Executive Secretary (w/in 10 working days) sends it to the President, who has 60 days to either approve or disapprove the recommendation, or to seek an extension from the Senate. If approved by the President, the recommendation becomes university policy. If disapproved by the President, the recommendation is returned to the Senate for possible override (requires 2/3 vote) and submission to the General Faculty for its recommendation to the President. The President has the final authority.
