

"The String Orchestra of Zurich" will be performing Sunday, April 18th at 4:00 p.m. in Whitehead Auditorium. For details, see page 11.

Open house for P.E. Complex scheduled

For about two years the public has called it "that big building under construction on Baytree." Now it is finished and the public is invited to see the new Physical Education Complex at Valdosta State College at an open house Sunday (April 18) between 2-4 p.m.

Said to be one of the South's finest campus physical education facilities, the building contains 105,591 square feet of floor space with an eventual seating capacity of 6,000 for basketball games. Locker rooms, classrooms, gymnastics, wrestling areas, a mezzanine with a four-lane running track, volleyball areas and half-courts for basketball practice are provided for the college's physical education program.

"There is not a facility I know of that is better equipped to teach physical education," said Dr. F. D. Toth, head of the department of physical education at VSC. "It is well equipped, from the restrooms and shower stalls to the elevators for the handicapped and to such areas as badminton courts. Whether it is a bachelor or master's degree the student is seeking in physical education, we are well equipped to help him or her attain it."

On order, said Toth, is extensive equipment for the athletic training room, and in the future he hopes to have racquet ball courts and an indoor swimming pool.

The Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia authorized construction of the plant in 1978 and approved a budget of $5,932,000 for the project in 1980. The Valdosta architectural firm of IPG, Inc., was employed with Kun-young V Chius and Associates, also of Valdosta, as consulting engineers.

"The opening of the new Physical Education Complex brings to fruition many years of dreaming, planning and hardwork," said Dr. Hugh C. Bailey, VSC president. "The splendid new facilities will provide opportunities for greater service to Valdosta and all this area in fulfilling its service mission.

"We hope the facility will be used extensively and that the lives of many will be richer and fuller because of it," he said.

Toth also sees the new facility as bringing business to Valdosta in the way of conventions.

"We could take care of six thousand or more people for a convention and this would certainly fill a void in the city, as well as bring in good business for Valdosta," Toth said.

Health, physical education and athletics have played a prominent part in the history of VSC, from croquet on the lawn in the early days to the newly organized football program. With the new Physical Education Complex, there is every reason to believe its competitive athletic program will continue to be highly respected, and that the teachers of physical education who get their training at Valdosta State will have one of the finest educational backgrounds available.

In addition to Toth, faculty members in the department are: J. Charles Cooper, James T. Dominey, James J. Goodman, Lee C. Hansen, Thomas G. Jackson, James L. Keith, Matilda D. Mathis, Judith Phillips, Nancy Scott, Tommy J. Thomas, C. Robert Tucker, Gertrude Veatch, and David L. Waples.

ODK inducts new members

Ten students at Valdosta State College were tapped for membership in Omicron Delta Kappa national leadership honor society this week, according to Dr. Alex McFadden, faculty secretary of the organization on the campus.

Exemplary character is of prime consideration for membership in the organization, said McFadden. Responsible leadership and service in campus life, superior scholarship, genuine fellowship and consecration to democratic ideals are other indispensable qualifications for membership.

Students named for membership are: Curtis L. Cochran III, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Cochran, Jr., Marian E. Harper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Harper, Valdosta; Iris Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston L. Cooper, Ochlocknee; Shelly Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Davis, Mitch Everett, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Doug Everett, Robert Swale, son of Mrs. Bernice Swale, and Laura Jane Peden, daughter of Mrs. Shirley M. Peden, all of Albany; Steven Clary Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Jones of Adel; Donna Sheffield, daughter of Mrs. Ann M. Sheffield of Blakely, and Mary Jean Woolard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Woolard of Sylvester.

Bret Allen is president of the VSC chapter.

Dr. Bailey reported in good condition

President Hugh Bailey was admitted to South Georgia Medical Center Saturday after suffering from severe abdominal pains. Exploratory surgery was performed and Dr. Bailey's condition was diagnosed as appendicitis.

According to a hospital spokesperson, President Bailey was listed in "good" condition as of Tuesday evening.

Well-wishers may address correspondence to Dr. Bailey at South Georgia Medical Center, Room 351. The Spectator wishes Dr. Bailey a speedy recovery.

ATTENTION NATIONAL DIRECT STUDENT LOAN [NDSL] AND FEDERAL NURSING LOAN BORROWERS

If you are graduating this quarter or not returning to VSC in the fall you must complete an exit interview. Stop by the Office of Business and Finance, Nevins Hall, or call 247-3214 to make an appointment.

Counseling Center Offers Spring Groups

The VSC Counseling Center is offering two new groups during Spring Quarter. The groups are available to all interested students and are free of charge.

"Understanding Yourself And Others"

This will be a working group designed for people to deal with their specific issues. The content will vary with the person's needs. Some areas that may be appropriate are: learning how emotions are produced and how they can be controlled and changed; learning to accept oneself and others; learning how to be happy and not live with a self-defeating lifestyle.

The group begins on April 22nd and will be held from 4:00 to 5:30 on Thursdays. The group will run for six weeks.

"Test Anxiety: How To Reduce It"

This group is designed to help students learn skills to reduce and cope with tension and anxiety related to test-taking. During the group sessions, participants will learn a muscle relaxation technique that can be utilized to inhibit test related anxiety. Participants will also learn to visualize and recreate anxiety associated with test-taking in order to reduce the anxiety. Skills will be taught to help students cope with test anxiety during periods of study for tests and when actually taking tests. The emphasis of the group will be to develop self control of test related anxiety and tension.

The group begins on April 28th and will be held from 4:00 to 5:00 on Wednesdays.

LOSS

"Living On-Surviving Sadness"

The Counseling Center is offering a special LOSS group to students again this quarter. The group is designed for people who have experienced a loss in their lives. Loss may include such experiences as death, divorce, loss of a relationship, loss of self-esteem and others. The group is designed to help people become aware of their feelings and to learn to deal with their feelings more effectively. Interested persons should contact Debra Welch at the Counseling Center by April 16th.

For more information on any of these groups, call the Counseling Center at 247-3303.

Major Vincent Chandler takes over directorship

By Charla Thornhill

Major Vincent Chandler has temporarily taken over the Aerospace Studies directorship. He was formerly assistant director.

Major Chandler is originally from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and has served in the military for fifteen years. While serving in Viet Nam, he flew in over three hundred combat missions. He is a graduate of Villanova University in Philadelphia and has master's degrees from Georgia College and Creton University.

Major Chandler transferred to Valdosta State from Ofett Air Force Base in Omaha, Nebraska. He served at Robbins Air Force Base in Macon from 1972 till 1976, and has spent a total of seven years living in Georgia.

When asked his opinion of Valdosta State and his new position, Major Chandler said, "I really like the college, the administration, and the students. The new position is going to be a challenge, but I'm going to like it."

Major Chandler will serve as director of Aerospace Studies until August when Lieutenant Colonel Kish will take the position. Chandler will then resume his position as assistant director until the Summer of 1983.

Major Chandler pointed out that sports are his hobby. When asked how he felt about the new Blazer football team he said, "It's great; I already have my tickets!"

Head Resident selections begin April 19 for 82-83

by Lee Strickland

Head Residents and Resident Assistants for the 1982-83 school year will be chosen on the basis of interviews and evaluations which will begin on April 19.

Perspective Head Residents will be interviewed on April 19-22. They will have three interviews. The first will be with a group of current Head Residents, who will be briefed on professional interviewing techniques and objectives.

Then the applicant will schedule appointments with Dr. Shamim Sisson, Associate Dean of students, and Leigh Ann St. Andrew of the Housing Office and be interviewed by each of them. Afterwards Dr. Sisson and Ms. St. Andrew will evaluate the results of the three interviews and choose the Head Residents.

All prospective Resident Assistants must first turn in applications. Resident Assistant interviews will begin on May 8; there will be a short informative session on May 7 for the interviewees. Prospective Resident Assistants will be interviewed by a group of current Head Residents and Resident Assistants who also have been briefed on interviewing techniques. Some applicants will be called back for a second interview, which will be on May 12, 13, or 14.

Confidentiality will be stressed among the staff members who conduct the interviews. Information collected during the course of the interviews will not be discussed outside of official evaluation sessions.

Those students who are chosen must either have already completed Psychology 487 or speak to Leigh Ann St. Andrew about taking it during Summer quarter; the course is a requirement for Resident Assistants, and it will not be offered Fall quarter.

SGA sponsors Register

By Ramona Butler

The SGA is once again sponsoring a Freshman Register on a non-profit basis. The register is designed to help new incoming students become more familiar with their surroundings.

In the register, the first ten pages contains an introduction to the campus, messages from faculty and student leaders, a campus map, and general campus information. The next section contains pictures of new incoming students with brief biographical data listing their name, hometown, major, and hobbies.

New incoming students can participate free. The company, College and University Press, printing the books will mail a request to new students over the summer asking for a photograph and biographical information. The company will print the register which will cost the student $7, and mail the registers to the SGA at the beginning of Fall quarter. The students who purchased a book will have the responsibility of picking it up from the SGA.

The register is a great way for the new student during the first hectic weeks of dorm life to match new faces with names.

Baby makes her blue jeans talk

Beauregarde L. Reade

As a rule, I avoid special nights that establishments in Valdosta use to increase the number of customers. These special events include mud-wrestling, wet T-shirt contests, and the like.

The main reason I avoid great cultural events like these is my health. Girls who participate in these kinds of contests are usually, at worst, cute. Cute girls are easy to fall in love with. Cute girls of college age usually have jealous boyfriends also.

Cute girls don't go for your average, run of the mill, jealous boyfriend either. They like big, muscular guys that lift tremendous weights, eat nails, and say clever things such as "What?" and "Huh?"

If you were to approach the winner or a contestant, her big boyfriend would mysteriously appear out of nowhere.

He would then be upset for two reasons. First, you were putting moves on his little honey. You'll not make any brownie points with him that way.

Second, he'll be mad because she probably didn't tell him she was going to be in a contest like this in the first place. He wants to inflict bodily harm, but it is socially unacceptable to hit a girl. Guess who gets it for both reasons.

Well, last week I broke my perfect record of non-attendance of such cultural events.

Wednesday marked the publication of this quarter's first Spectator, and the sound defeat of my intramural softball team. The combination of the two obviously called for a celebration.

I called a friend of mine, Grizzly Yank, and we proceeded to celebrate. After some debate, we decided to go to The Knights of Georgia for two reasons. The first was two-for-one drinks. The second was a tight blue jeans contest.

Yank is proof that a transplanted yankee, once he learns how to act Southern, can be one of the nicest persons you'd ever want to meet.

We got there at nine, found a table up front and to the middle, and ordered drafts. Something seemed to be missing, though.

The band, Farenheit, finally began to play around ten. It was then that I made the clever deduction that the band was what I had been missing. Sometimes I amaze myself by arriving at such conclusions.

It had been a while since I had gotten together with a friend to discuss politics and girls over a few beers and a package of Malbueros. I'm not advocating the use of alcohol and cigarettes, but there is a certain state of awareness and calm that can only be achieved in a smokey bar.

I'm sure Yank and myself could have solved all the problems of mankind and the world in general had anyone asked us right then.

Anyway, the stroke of midnight heralded the march of denim. A curtain was raised to hide the faces of the contestants. The logic of this eluded me since we all saw them when they walked up there.

One misinformed lass, who must have gotten her contests mixed up, strolled by in a blue bathing suit. I don't think she won.

I really don't know who won. As far as I was concerned, it was a tie between two of them. I couldn't bear to see either of those two lose. I had to leave first.

Besides, they're having the world championship of tight blue jeans of Valdosta (or something like that) in a few weeks. I'll go then and see the cream of the crops.

And, I'll avoid jealous boyfriends.

Sincerely,

Beauregarde Livingston Reade

Professor speaks out on evaluations

Dear Editor,

I wish to commend James Hendricks for his article on Faculty Evaluations which appeared in the April 7 edition of the Spectator.

Thank you Mr. Hendricks for saying the same thing that many of us in the profession have always said. Your editorial demonstrated a marked maturity and insight into the problem. There were several valid points and I hope they will be noticed.

I might add that many of us do attach a good deal of significance to post graduate evaluations by our students who have left VSC to enter graduate schools or employment. It is hoped that you and others will continue providing us this valuable information after your departure from VSC.

Cordially,
Hugh H. West

UTA Student Government reinstated

In a recent election, students at the University of Texas-Austin approved a constitution for a new student government.

Texas' life without government was not altogether unusual. Dozens of colleges across the country have disbanded their student assemblies for a variety of reasons, and several others are considering doing so now.

A number of them have now created replacements.

Besides Texas, Dartmouth, Virginia, Georgia, Southern Illinois at Edwardsville and Northern Colorado, among others, have disbanded all or part of their student governments since 1978. In addition, Oklahoma, Eastern Mennonite College, Stanford and Missouri have recently considered dissolving their governments, too.

In most cases, the dissolutions were prompted by public government bungling of campus events, seemingly-endless government haggling and resultant student apathy.

Texas was the first major university in the seventies to actually vote for anarchy.

"The motive at the time of abolishment was to re-organize the government by getting rid of it and starting over," recalls Richard Heller, UT's assistant dean of students.

But despite urgings from the administration, students regularly rejected efforts to replace it until the elections this March. Even then, voter turnout was low.

Heller says the university hasn't been hurt much by the lack of a student government.

Students serve on the same campus committees that politicians used to, and the more than 500 student organizations at Austin had taken up much of the slack for special interest groups. In addition, each college within the university maintains its own student council.

But the disappearance of a central government "has meant that we haven't had a central representative body to comment on campus issues," Heller observes.

At Georgia, which followed Texas into anarchy in 1979, "There are a few people who have expressed an interest in student government, but there's nothing formulated or concrete in the works," reports Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs Tom Cochran.

Yet he expects a centralized government to re-appear "within the next couple of years."

"There's still a place for a centralized student voice," he continues on page 13

Spotlight on Sports

In case you haven't noticed, there is a new bunch of guys running around VSC these days. These robust fellows will form the Blazers first ever football team. And for those of you who couldn't spot a football player when you saw one, some of them have gone and shaved their heads.

This head shaving business has gotten a little out of hand with nearly every major college team sporting a hair-less wonder, but for a bunch of guys forming a new football team, it seems to say a little more. Some of the shaved ones haven't even made the team yet.

Now some people will argue that players with hair can play just as good as players without hair. While this may be true, I still would commend these young men for their dedication. Go Blazers!

Since we're on the subject of football let's talk about Head Coach Jim Goodman. Goodman, who is respected as one of the best recruiters in the country, apparently has attended the Bear Bryant-Vince Dooley school of coaching. He continues to say that his first team will be lucky to win a game. My personal opinion is that Goodman has the talent to win, Gulf South Conference or not, watch out next fall for the football Blazers to continue an old VSC tradition...winning.

A couple of final notes: Lady Blazer coach Charles Cooper missed one award last Thursday so I'll present it now. Best Person Able To Take A Right Hook goes to Missie Milton.

Finally, The Atlanta Braves are 7-0...I told you so.

Milton, France receive honors at banquet

By Bart Miller

The Valdosta State College Lady Blazer basketball team held their annual awards banquet last Thursday night with Sherri France and Missie Milton coming away as the big winners.

France, a 5 foot 9 forward from Melbourne, Fl., captured the MVP trophy for her outstanding play in VSC's 16-8 season. Milton, a 5 foot 5 guard from Albany, came away with the Best Offensive and Miss Lady Blazer awards.

Milton, Vickie Smith and Debby Dernay, the only three seniors on this year's squad, all received plaques in appreciation for their four years contribution.

Sophmores Janis Williams, Shelia Wilcox and Janice Washington split the other three trophies given. Williams won the Hustle award, Wilcox captured the Best Defensive award while Washington latched onto the Best Rebounder.

Although VSC was ranked in the top 10 in Division 2 this year, Cooper said that he is expecting "bigger and better things" out of next year's squad. The Lady Blazers have already scheduled 19 games for next year, including 9 home games to be played in the new gym.

Sherri France [top] and Missie Milton [bottom] came home with the gold Thursday night after the annual Lady Blazer awards banquet

Blazers split at West Ga.

By Bart Miller

VSC's Blazer baseball team used a strong pitching performance from Jeff Agarter and a Mark Powell homerun to beat West Georgia College 7-3 and gain a split in their double-header last Saturday. The Blazers dropped the first game 5-1.

The split left VSC with a 28-15 overall record while West Georgia goes to 22-5. Blazer coach Tommy Thomas was pleased with the split saying "Anytime you can come up to West Georgia and get out with a split, you're doing good." Thomas also predicted that the South Atlantic Conference tourney was going to be "a real donnybrook."

The Blazers actually could have come up with a sweep except for two costly errors which allowed the Braves to score 4 times in the fifth inning.

Pitcher Dennis Rich spoiled an otherwise good performance when he threw two balls away to give West Georgia two runs and put two others on base. Terry Elrod's single sent both of them home and the Blazers were done.

VSC bounced back quickly in the second game scoring five times in the first inning. Singles by Richie Johnson and Bobby Roche and a double by Tony Bowden gave VSC a 2-0 lead. Powell's three run homer made it 5-0 and the Blazers never looked back.

VSC continues their road trip with games at Georgia State on Tuesday, Georgia on Wednesday, Florida State on Friday and Columbus College on Saturday. The Blazers do return home on Sunday to play Florida Southern.

This COULD be the Year

Beauregarde L. Reade

During election time, it is easy to jump on someone's bandwagon. It's a little different this time of year, though. This time the bandwagon is carrying...the Atlanta Braves.

At the time I'm writing this, they're 7-0. The last time that happened they were in Milwaukee and won the World Series. During these five games, Rafael Ramirez has not made an error, Ted Turner has not tried to be a guest manager and has not tried to send Bob Horner to Richmond, and they have swept the Houston Astros in three games. None of the above can be classified under the heading "Small Feats."

Rick Mahler has thrown two shutouts. The Braves originally signed him as a favor to his brother Micky. Micky's current whereabouts is unknown to the general public.

The Braves ought to hire him as their talent scout. Skeptics say, "they'll fold. They don't have what it takes. Look for the Yankees and Dodgers in October."

So what? Nobody should be forced to play baseball in October anyway. I watch the Atlanta Falcons in October.

Besides, I've been a Braves fan for a long time now. I got mad at my uncle in '69 for pulling for the Mets.

I got mad when the Braves traded Felix Millan to the Mets. I don't remember when they did it, but I remember being really ticked off. Those two things and the Yankees are why I don't like New York today.

There are other things I remember. For one thing, there have been bunches of managers. I liked Eddie Mathews. He was the only one that had a winning record (51-50) for the season when he was fired. Folks like Clyde King, Dave Bristol, and Bobby Cox followed. I imagine I missed a few, but some things are best forgotten.

My favorite manager of all time, Billy Martin, never managed the Braves.

I remember Hank Aaron, Dave Johnson, and Darrel Evans all hitting 40 homeruns in one season. I will never forget Hank belting number 715 into Tommy House's glove in the bullpen. It was a dramatic moment despite those silly softball suits the Braves were wearing then.

The Braves had many players of promise that never made it. Among them were Barry Bonnell, Earl Williams, Buzz Capra, and Pat Rockett. Capra was good till he hurt his arm. The other three were vastly overrated.

Other Braves that made it big before, during or after their tenure in Hotlanta were: Dusty Baker, Gaylord Perry, Phil and Joe Niekro, Hank Aaron, Joe Torre, Eddie Mathews, Chris Chambliss, Jim Bouton, Bob Horner, Jeff Burroughs, Jimmy Wynn, and Tom Paciorek. Phil Niekro deserves a special tip of the hat for staying his entire career with the Braves.

My favorite player (outside of Niekro), Pete Rose, never played for the Braves.

I've always said when I go to that great ballpark in the sky, I want my body cremated and my ashes strown over centerfield of Atlanta Stadium during the first game of the first World Series ever played there.

I may never get my wish. If Braves' losses were dollars, they could pay off the United States' national debt.

Sure, I make jokes about the Braves. Johnny Carson, in the guise of Karnak, did the best one though. He held the envelope to his head and said, "Catch 22."

The question in the envelope read, "what would happen if you hit 100 fly balls to the Atlanta Braves' outfield?"

Still, I've pulled for the Braves, mostly through thin, for years. Now they're going good, and I'm enjoying it. I don't care if they're watching the Falcons in October. I don't even care if they go 7-155. Right now, I'm happy.

Go Braves!

Sincerely,

Beauregarde Livingston Reade

Majority of parents are willing to pay for college education

A majority of parents are willing to assume "primary responsibility" for funding their offspring's educations, according to a study by the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES).

Most parents' favorite form of federal student aid, moreover, would be tax deductions instead of the current mix of loans and grants, the study found.

Fifty-six percent of the parents asked told NCES they were willing to take over primary responsibility for sending their children through college. NCES, however, did not ask them to monetarily define how much they'd be willing to spend.

Twenty-four percent of the parents felt students themselves should bear the brunt of college financing, while 10 percent said the government should have the primary responsibility.

Parents then got to choose their favorite kind of aid from among programs like student loans, direct funding to colleges, state aid and work study.

A full 93 percent of the parents preferred tax deductions. Work-study programs were the second favorite. Parents least liked a plan to give federal money to the states.

Low-income and minority-group member parents didn't like the tax deduction plan as much as other parents. While white parents tended to favor tax deductions, black parents favored work-study programs. Hispanic parents endorsed plans about equally.

Lab Theatre opens tonight

by Leah Herrin

"Whose Life Is It Anyway?" will be presented in the Lab Theatre Wednesday, April 14 through Saturday, April 17. Performances will begin at 8:15 p.m. every evening.

Jimmy Spearman, the director of "Whose Life is it Anyway?" states that the play is "philosophical by dealing with the life force itself."

The play centers around Ken Harrison, played by Michael Wright, who is paralyzed after an automobile accident. Ken desires to be released from the hospital which means leaving the equipment that keeps him alive.

Ken realizes that he will die. He is not given credit for this knowledge by his doctor, Dr.

Emerson. Dr. Emerson, played by Jeff Rolle, feels that Ken suffers from deep depression and is unable to make his own decisions. To complicate matters for Harrison the consulting physician, Dr. Clare Scott, who is played by Janie Allen, is attracted to him. Dr. Scott's feelings are a love out of sympathy.

The antagonists of the drama are everyone that Ken contacts. These people are professionals that treat him as an invalid and not as a person.

Ken's own personality is what brings humor into the play. Ken is still himself and has only changed physically. Jimmy Spearman, the director, continue on page 11

Beatty and Keaton propels "Reds"

After viewing the motion picture "Reds," one has to be impressed with the ambition and talent of Warren Beatty. The film, large in scope and budget, could have easily fallen flat on its face. Beatty's guiding hand as director, lead actor, and co-writer prevents this from happening. "Reds" deals with the radical American left in the early Twentieth Century, the Russian Revolution, and the love triangle between journalist John Reed, Louise Bryant (Diane Keaton), and playwright Eugene O'Neil. If you thought "Smokey and the Bandit" marked a highwater point in cinematic art, this movie is probably not your cup of tea.

Communism is not exactly popular subject matter among American movie goers. The evils perpetuated by under the Communist system since 1917 are almost inseparable in our minds from Communist Doctrine. When watching "Reds" it is important to try to remember the appeal than an ideology promising equality for all would hold for Americans who were incensed over the social injustices of American industrialism. Such an American is John Reed.

The slaughters of Stalin and Maos' cultural revolution had not yet occurred during the time in which the movie is set.

Reed begins the movie as a committed journalist, but a casual radical sympathizer. Although he possessed a social conscience, he was essentially an observer of events. He meets Bryant, the suffragette wife of a Seattle dentist, who makes her husband uncomfortable by posing for nude photographs. She leaves her husband to follow Reed to Greenwich Village, the seat of American counter culture, but finds herself less than happy with Reed's frequent comings and goings. She finds temporary consolation in the person of Eugene O'Neal,

Prof's ceramic mural is dedicated

A large ceramic mural created by Don Penny, professor of art, was dedicated in the lobby of the School of the Arts at Valdosta State College Monday, April 12, at 7:30 p.m.

The mural, entitled "Canyon Four," is 17 feet long by five and a half feet wide and is hung between the doors of Whitehead Auditorium in the lobby of the School of the Arts. The low relief unglazed mural in varying shades of earth colors is made of Ocmulgee red Georgia clay.

"The title," Penny explained, "Comes from my long-standing interest in geology. It is the fourth in a series I've done in the last two years in response to some ideas I had about the American West."

Penny, whose works are in both private and public collections throughout the South, said the mural is suggestive of sedentary layers exposed in the West, especially in the Grand Canyon

"It is like a very liberal synthesis of a cross section of maps. And it is almost like looking down on a mountain range," he said.

The project, which took months of hard physical labor, was funded by the Georgia Council for the Arts, Valdosta State College and the National Endowment for the Arts, he said.

Mounted on a redwood frame with a bronze plaque nearby, the well-lighted mural is an arresting piece of art as you step into the lobby of the building. How does an artist go about creating such an enormous mural?

"I used 1,400 pounds of dry clay and of course it had to be mixed with water to make it workable. We took the clay and added iron oxide and manganese dioxide or both which gave us slightly different colors, all earth tones. We made sheets of clay on the floor, which was the only space large enough," he said.

That phase of the work was done during the Christmas holidays in an unused, unheated classroom. His son, Adam, 11, helped, as did Bobby Mayer and Chris Cantrell, both VSC art students.

"We cut the clay into about 1,000 pieces and we had to build a truss bridge over it. Each piece had to be taken up by hand, then the back carved out so it wouldn't blow up in firing. Each piece had to be coded with cobalt ink so it could be put back in the same place," he continued. "It took 12 kiln loads to get it all fired."

After each piece came out of the kiln it had to be cemented in the right place on the plywood frame which had been mounted on the wall.

"If you dropped one piece or stepped on it, it couldn't be replaced. I was praying that no one would sneeze or step on any of the pieces during that time," said Penny.

"But when we finished, it all went up within one-quarter of an inch, which really surprised me."

He is quick to point out the gigantic undertaking would not have been possible without the support of VSC President Hugh Bailey, as well as Lee Bradley, Projects Officer, who helped him write the grants, the maintenance crew, Dan Parris, Valdosta architect, "and a lot of other people."

Michael Wright plays Ken Harrison, the dying patient in "Whose Life Is It Anyway?"

Spring Fling set for Saturday

By Malinda Simpson

This year, since VSC is not having homecoming, the CUB is sponsoring the "Spring Fling." It is a carnival-like festival which will be held Saturday, the 17th, from 1:00 p.m. to around 7:00 p.m. in back of the Fine Arts building.

There are approximately twenty-two organizations that are participating in the "Spring Fling." Some of those participating are The Spectator, which will be selling balloons; Lowndes Hall which will be sponsoring a pie throwing; AEA which will sponsor a dunking booth; KD's will have a fortune teller; the Marketing Club will have a Wheel of Fortune; SAM will sponsor "Bucking barrels," and AOA and AKA will have a balloon-dart game with many nice prizes which were donated to them by various shops in Valdosta. The most appealing part of "Spring Fling" is that the organizations will be allowed to keep 100 percent of the total profits earned.

There will also be bake sales, and a car bash, where everyone gets a big stick and "bashes" in a car. The entertainment features the "Reunion Blues Band," the band from "Papa Joe's," and the "Mason-Dixon Trio," an all female blue-grass band.

There is no admission and everyone is invited to come and participate, or just sit around and listen to the music.

Literary magazine gets a vote of confidence

by Leah Herrin

Spring quarter had brought a rising interest in reestablishing a literary arts magazine at Valdosta State College.

The function of a literary magazine is to serve as a medium for students and faculty to display their talents in areas such as art, poetry, short stories and others. Most colleges and universities have such an outlet. Many writers have been started through college literary magazines.

The suggestion of starting a literary magazine was brought forth at a recent Student Senate meeting.

Dr. Willa Valencia, Head of the English Department, is "strongly in favor" of this rekindled interest in the literary arts magazine.

Dr. Valencia said, "The time is right. We have plenty of talent on campus in the faculty and students. Other colleges much smaller than this one have a magazine for the literary arts."

"Quest For Fire" takes us back 80,000 years as man fights to survive.

"Quest For Fire" may spark into a classic

For years motion pictures like "Star Wars," "Star Trek" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" have excited our imagination by taking us far into the distant future.

Now 20th Century-Fox presents a motion picture which takes us to a time that is just as unknown and mysterious...the distant past.

"Quest For Fire" is a spectacular science-fantasy adventure set 80,000 years ago, a period when men lived as members of fiercely loyal tribes, scattered throughout a vast, unexplored world. These tribes--some of them savage, others peaceful--battled each other and their environment for survival.

The key to their survival was fire--to warm their campsites and drive off attacking tribes and predatory animals.

"Quest For Fire" is the extraordinary adventure of three courageous warriors who venture beyond the safety of their tribal campsite when their fire is destroyed during a battle with a rival tribe. Although these warriors possessed fire, they did not yet know how to create it. In the course of their perilous journey to find another source of the sacred, life-giving flame, they encounter vicious beasts, cannibals who nearly take them captive and--most important of all--they discover the secret of how to make fire anew.

In its initial engagements in New York and Los Angeles, "Quest For Fire" broke attendance records previously held by "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." The visual beauty and excitement of this magical re-creation of an alien, primitive world stunned audiences and impressed critics, who called it "the next 'Star Wars'" and "the movie adventure of a lifetime."

"Quest For Fire" continued to create excitement as it opens at theatres across the country.

Although it is rated R, the film has been applauded by educators as a unique and important production, teaching us about our ancestors and the beginnings of our civilization while entertaining us with its spectacle. In France, where "Quest For Fire" had its world premiere, the book upon which the film was based is required reading in the public school, and the film itself was endorsed by numerous scholars as an event which all students should have the opportunity to experience.

The French Academy of Motion Picture Arts & voted "Quest For Fire" the Best Picture of the Year Award (the equivalent of our Oscar), and in this country the film was voted a special Best Picture prize by the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy and Horror Films.

"Quest For Fire" is now playing (or will soon be opening) in your city. A Michael Gruskoff Presentation of an ICC-International Cinema Corporation Production, the Jean-Jacques Annaud Film stars Everett McGill, Rae Dawn Chong, Ron Perlman and Nameer El-Kadi. Annaud directed from a screenplay by Gerard Brach, based on the novel by J.H. Rosny, Sr. The music is by Philippe Sarde.

"You ought to be in pictures."

High School art exhibited

About 100 works of art by high school students are on exhibition this month in the Valdosta State College Gallery in the School of the Arts.

Students from Cook County High School, Tift County High School, Lowndes High School, Coffee County High School and Valdosta High School are participating in the annual High School Invitational Exhibition.

On display are pen and ink drawings, prints, paintings, sculpture, weavings, photography, charcoal drawings, acrylics, soft sculpture and other art media.

Don Penny, VSC Gallery Director and professor of art, terms it a "filtered show" because art teachers in the various schools selected the best works of their students for the exhibition.

"This is really a very exciting show," said Penny. "We see a lot of potential here, and we'd certainly like to have these students when they finish their high school work."

The gallery is open to the public at no charge from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. Friday.

The week of activities got off to a great start with Cowboy Ball held at the King of Road Wednesday night. Thursday was a day for sun and suds, as the brothers hosted a front yard party. Sheets and ivy were the dress Friday Night for the popular TOGA march and dance. The brothers and pledges carried flaming torches to light the way as they serenaded their dates in Langdale Circle. After the reading of the scroll the march continued to the American Legion.

contends, "and, personally, I'd like to see student government back on campus. It provides that focal point of student interest, and assures everyone that students have a voice in what's going on."

Similarly, "it all started out real, real negative when the government was first abolished" at Northern Colorado, says Mary Beth Gibson, UNC's campus activities coordinator.

"But it's turned out to be very positive. Students themselves admitted that what they had didn't work, and now we've created something better. The new system is a heck of a lot more accountable."

The new system, launched last year, allows for one student president and 11 vice presidents to help make decisions in various areas of student concern like student services, university relations, equal opportunity and academic and faculty affairs.

Dartmouth, which abolished its undergraduate council in 1969, two years ago also reinstated a student assembly, mostly to help focus student participation in campus affairs.

Study questions sorority lifestyle

Sorority life may be teaching women passive and out-dated ways of living in contemporary society, according to a study by a University of Washington sociology professor.

Barbara Risman, who authored the study, observed sorority members in their live-in campus environments over three-year period to measure any differences between them and unaffiliated students at the university.

Her findings may not go over well with the hundreds of sororities around the country, but Risman is convinced that sorority life reinforces old stereotypes of women, and may actually hinder them when they leave college.

For instance, she points out, sorority members typically hew to a "subordinate" role in the greek system, waiting to be asked to social events and allowing makes to pay for them, while using coquettish behavior to progress through the environment.

"I concentrate solely on the things girls learned about femininity," Risman says, "and what it meant to be female. I realize there are some very positive sides to being in an organization."

But she believes that the tight organization of sororities is the main reason they have not updated their visions of what it means to be a woman in modern society.

"Because they are voluntary organizations, people who disagree tend to resign or just stay silent," she observes. "So things stay the way they are. And because they're so well organized, much of the boy-girl behavior is almost ritualized. It just doesn't leave a lot of room for change."

In her classes and presentations of her study, Risman says student reactions range from "Well, you just don't understand the whole picture" to "outright anger."

But, she explains, "the whole picture wasn't what I was after."

New trend in video

TORRANCE, CA (CPS) - In a trend that may soon find its way to college campuses, six

California high schools are experimenting this year with video yearbooks to supplement their usual paper editions.

"We're not trying to replace paper yearbooks at all," says Dan Farrom, producer/director of Video Yearbooks, Inc., the company which is producing the videotapes. "This is something students can add to their regular yearbooks as a supplement."

"We do highlights of major events, edit them, and blend them with music," he explains. "There are also interviews with students and a section where the kids can give their wishes for the future."

Everything is then packaged into a one-hour videotape, and sold to students for $60 a cassette.

As for the college market, Farrom says his production team is ready to take on any campus that's interested in chronicling the year's activities on tape.

But, he adds, "We've found that most colleges already have their own video departments or even their own tv studios, so they may choose to do it themselves if they find the idea attractive."

"Reds" from page 8 played by Jack Nicholson. Reed, in the meantime is making the transition from observer to instigator, becoming more and more involved in the American Communist Party. A schism in the party prompts Reed to go to Russia to seek certification for his faction of American Communists. Once there, he finds leaving is not so easy. To tell more would give the movie away.

"Reds" is a long film, lasting three and a half hours. Interspersed with the action are interviews with contemporaries of Reed, which helps to prevent fatigue on the part of the viewer. The movie received three Academy Awards: Best Director, Best Supporting Actress (Maureen Stapleton), and Best Cinematography.

McGovern, Moral Majority launch a campus lecture war

It may be fading as fast as the memories of the 1980 elections off campus, but the on-campus debate over the political role of the Christian right has recently escalated into something of a lecture war between left and right.

On the left are former U.S. senators George McGovern Birch Bayh--both of them victims of Moral Majority politicking in 1980--who have mounted a vigorous, almost frenetically-paced anti-rightist campus lecture campaign.

On the right are conservatives like writers William Rusher and Howard Phillips and Moral Majority spokesman Cal Thomas, who have taken to the campus hustings to defend themselves against the McGovern-Bayh campaign.

The McGovern-Bayh campaign has been on a broad offensive from coast to coast this school year.

McGovern spent the fall hustling from Ferrum Junior College in Virginia to the University of Missouri, to Purdue, Cal State-Fullerton, Alabama, Smith, Stanford, Eckerd College in Florida, and 42 other campuses.

Amount the 25 colleges he's visited just since January are Ohio Northern, Louisiana State, Central Michigan and the University of California-Santa Cruz.

Bayh, whose schedule is less hectic than McGovern's, mixes debates with conservatives among his lectures against right-wing politics.

Their efforts spring from McGovern's promise, made the evening after his November 1980 senatorial defeat, to form a liberal group to try to counter the conservatives' advertising.

The result was a group called Americans for Common Sense (ACS).

"The lecture series is simply part of our public relations effort, designed to cast some doubt on the views espoused by the Moral Majority," explains Ruth Claveloux, ACS' research director.
