British invasion is a hoax

by Beauregarde L. Reade

"If the British attack South Georgia, we'll be ready for them!" Those were the brave words Colonel Duke "Snoopy" Pettigrew proclaimed to a large group of three people in the VSC Physical Education Complex Sunday morning at oh-two hundred hours.

The three weighed 425, 317, and 285 pounds respectively.

Petty, commanding officer of the Lowndes County Chapter of Uncle Larry's Commando Squadron and Dance Troupe, said that past reports of British activity in South Georgia may have come from unreliable sources.

"Those reports of British activity in South Georgia may have come from unreliable sources," Petty claimed at the meeting.

Duke Petty

Petty theorizes the British chased Argentine banana boats to the South Georgia coast, followed them to Atlanta, and got lost somewhere out on I-20 West.

"Our intelligence reports seem to indicate that the British fleet is actually somewhere in the Southern Hemisphere. Knowing the way those tea drinkers drive them boats, they probably got lost in Log Flume #2 at Six Flags," said Petty.

The Duke has been surveying the Lowndes County area from his Cessna 808 modified with twin double-barreled twelve gauge shotguns at full choke. He has yet to report an English sighting. "I ain't seen the first redcoat or flintlock rifle," declared Petty semi-emphatically.

When asked what would happen if the British shot his plane down, Petty thoughtfully replied, "well...gosh...I guess I'd hit the ground real hard. I fly pretty high you know."

The good Colonel assures the public that Lowndes County would still be in good hands "should this unlikely event actually occur."

VSC to field first hockey team

by Charla Thornhill

Valdosta State College athletic director, F.D. Toth, reports that Valdosta will indeed have a hockey team beginning next year. In a telephone interview earlier this week, Toth stated that the team had been shipped to Alaska where they are training at Juno State College. He also admitted, when asked about a nasty rumor circulating around the campus, that the new recruits for the hockey team are the cuts from the football team.

In order to get "inside" the story, this reporter travelled to Juno, Alaska, where she immediately spotted the bald Valdostans on the ice. While co-ordination is not their strong point, the team appears to be well-organized defensively. It seems that they have a new defense strategy; they pile their bodies in a mound in front of the net so that the offense cannot score. While this defense works well, the transition to offense appears rather awkward with arms, legs, sticks, and bald heads tangling.

In a personal interview with a recruit who wished to remain anonymous, the reason for the new hockey team surfaced. The recruit stated, "They gave me a scholarship to play football, but, uh, they found out I couldn't play too good. Then my paw, he got out his gun, and he told 'em they better pay for my schoolin' cause we's done signed a contract!" Toth reportedly contacted Juno State the same day.

Toth has also asked that, along with this article, we run a request for suggested names and mascots for the team. He feels that the traditional Blazer emblem is not appropriate for the new ice-hockey team. Any suggestions should be sent to The Speckled Tater, VSC box 194, inter-campus mail.

Biller hosts wild party

By Lewetta Wesson

Mart Biller held one of the zaniest parties ever thrown on the VSC campus.

Those invited were instructed to bring their own bottle Wesson oil and a roll of wax paper.

Over 20 people attended the extravaganza.

Upon leaving the party Laura Brotemn described it as being

"wild." "It's the slipperiest party I've ever been too."

"There were some real greasers there."

The highlight of the evening was when the party moved to bathroom to try and remove some of the oil.

"It took over thirty bottle of dishwashing liquid, and a lot of people still left with oily hair," said Biller.

When asked what the wax paper was used for Biller replied, "it was used to protect the furniture."

If you're curious as to who might attend such a party just look around for those with oily hair.

Students demand real food

By Elmo Agnostic

The radical VSC group, "Students for Real Food," again reared its ugly head on campus the day after last Wednesday.

VSC Security Sgt. Hector Braise said, "I was afraid it was gonna get nasty. Some of them kids had deadly weapons in their hands!"

The deadly weapons were later identified as rolls the SRF members swiped to munch on during their picket.

The students, according to Braise, were barely within the law. "They held signs with words wrote on them and were walking in a counter-clockwise arch," he said shuddering, "Two or three of them spoke to each other once or twice." He smiled, "We locked them rascals up in a hurry for disturbing the peace."

Food Director Mike Void was found under his desk in a locked office eating a twinkie and exclaimed, "Make those animals go away! I've got a gun!"

Void then produced his Green Avenger water pistol.

The students for Real Food said their demands were: fresh rolls, meat made out of actual meat, and real lettuce.

In a desperate attempt to appease their unreasonable demands, Void set up a "Guess the Meal" night.

Void explained, "anyone who can guess what we're serving without asking the ladies in the serving lines will be treated to unlimited seconds."

A tracer will be placed on the "What's Happening" line to ensure that no one will use that vehicle to cheat.

According to Braise the ploy apparently worked. "There was a mass exodus to Stan's Studio 84 about 8 PM," he said.

ROTC at VSC holds annual military ball on May 15

The ROTC detachment here at Valdosta State held its annual military ball May 15, at the Moody Air Force Base Officer's Club. The affair is the highlight of the year for the cadets. Cadets in dress uniforms and their dates "tripped the light fantastic," as they danced long into the morning hours.

There were several dance contests, such as country, waltz, ballroom dancing, and disco. Along with this, was the excellent food provided by the "O" club.

First LT. Walter Chin, cadet morale, welfare, and recreation officer, and his wife, Rhonda, did an excellent job in preparing the affair, and the AFROTC detachment owes him a large "thank you" for a job well done.

Delta Chi's break Greek week record by eleven points

Cliff Whitehead
Public Relations Chairman

The Delta Chi's have again broken their own Greek Week record with a total of 128 points. Last year's record was 117 points. The Chi's are proud of the efforts last week by those brothers who participated, and of those who supported the Chi's. The week ended with a victory

Bar-be-que Saturday afternoon at the Chi house. They are proud of their numerous first place finishes, and will strive to break their record again next year!

The Chi's would also like to congratulate Miss Robin Prince who won the swimsuit contest last Wednesday. Robin is one of the Delta Chi sponsors, and they are proud of her!

Congratulations also to the Phi Mu's for finishing first in overall Greek Week for the sororities. They did an excellent job!

Alpha Thetas congratulate winner

The ladies of the Alpha Theta Chapter would like to congratulate the winner of the Miss Black VSC Pageant and the winner of the Miss Congeniality award Miss Beryl Williams, Warner Robins, Ga.

We also would like to congratulate the runner ups: 1st runner-up Miss Barbie Pierce, Hahira, GA; 2nd runner-up, Miss Tammy Brooks, Gainesville, GA; 3rd runner-up, Miss Geneasha Gordon, Tifton, GA.

Duke Petty from page 1

Petty practices simulated warfare.

"Captain Roy P. Hartsfield is high atop the Valdosta Courthouse at this very moment," Petty divulged.

"He'll hold up one Coleman lantern if the invasion is by land. If they're coming up the river, he'll hold up two Coleman lanterns." What would Captain Hartsfield do if the attack came by air?

"Probably duck," said Petty. "Those British fellows are terrible pilots."

Mauler body found mauled

These are the hideous remains of once somewhat renowned cartoonist Joey Maul.

by Anonymous Source

Valdosta, Ga.- A Valdosta State co-ed was found brutally murdered in his dorm room here Sunday night. Sgt. Vinson, investigating officer, reports that the body of a French lick, Indiana native,

Joey Maul, was found at 11:35 p.m. in his dorm room in Patterson Hall Sunday night.

Vinson recalls receiving a disturbance call at 11:00 p.m.

in the Oak Street parking lot sub-station. He then proceeded to mount his trusty Cushman and peddle to Patterson Hall, from where he had received the call. He reached Patterson

Hall at approximately 11:30 p.m. and was sent to the third floor by an anonymous student.

Vinson found Maul's body sprawled on the floor in his ransacked room. Bold red, spray-painted letters covered the walls and ceiling of the room and Vinson reports that the letters were T-K-E. Also found at the scene in Maul's clenched fist, was a piece of red fabric imprinted with a white skull and crossbones.

A Valdosta coroner's report shows that the cause of death was stabbing, with a total of fifty-six stab wounds being found on the body.

Vinson reports that no arrests have been made but that the primary suspect at present is Miss Linda O'Connell, a Valdosta State student, with all TKE's and TKE sponers being questioned.

Grimsdale assaults campus with actual acts of kindness

Brian W. Keller

Chaos disrupted a south Georgia campus recently when Gus Grimsdale, a do-gooder, unleashed manners upon his fellow classmates.

Grimsdale's first mistake was to open a door for coed Virginia Holsum, oralist and chastity belt wearer.

"The nerve of him," recalls Holsum, shyly sitting on the steps of the Happy Valley Institution. "Simply opening a door for me, huh? Ha! God as my..."

Memories of the encounter still haunt Holsum. She valiantly fights to hold back the tears.

"God as my witness," she continues, nervously, "that heathen had lust in his heart. He tried to rape me with his mind!"

Shocking...

Frank Rush, herb gardener, encountered Grimsdale while experimenting in his school's chemistry lab. Rush hazily recalls the meeting as "kinda, y'know, weird."

"Yeah," adds Rush, consciously playing with his ear. "That's what I'd call it. Weird. You'd think this dude was Mister Rogers or somethin' being so polite and all."

Rush absently gazes out the window, mutters something about "a nice day for a killing," and continues.

"So what if I dropped some papers on the floor," Rush says, fingering the cigarette holes in his shirt. "What business is it of his to pick them up? Yeah, that goody-two-shoes think he's Mr. Rogers. Hell, if I want the Magic Kingdom, I find it myself."

Apparently, Frank Rush and Virginia Holsum were not the only victims of Grimsdale's vicious attacks. Other students reported seeing Grimsdale pat a dog's head, actually smile, say "thank you," and, as one anonymous coed put it, "help some damn cripple across the road."

Drinking a gooseneck Harry's

Armpit Lounge, Jim-Bob Joe Jeff Jefferson fondly recalls his encounter with Grimsdale.

"Me an' the boys," Jefferson begins with a toothless grin, "were jus' sittin' in the library lookin' at that there bikini section in Sports Illustrated when this here sissy, some Grimsdale wimp, bumps into my buddy Cooter. You jus' don't bump into us boys an' git away with it, you know, so I hits him real good in the face. When I do, he begins apologizin' about bein' careless. I can't stand hearin' someone with manners. To me, that's pure communism. So I hits him real good agin'."

Jefferson pauses, orders another beer, and continues.

"Don't he know that manners done faded away from society?"

Grimsdales of the world: Don't you realize that manners are a thing of the past?

The end is near

James Hendricks

It is the end of another school year. As is customary, The Spectator staff has given way to the staff of The Speckled Tater.

It has been a good year for the Spectator. There are, of course, several faults that we will try to correct next year, but overall the paper has improved.

It is hoped that this edition will be taken in the light that was intended by the staff. We did not intend to hurt anyone's feelings.

We would like to express our appreciation to President Hugh Bailey, Vic-President Ron Barnette, Mr. Mike Floyd, the SGA, Coach Jim Goodman, and all the others who took the brunt of our jokes.

Without people such as these, The Speckled Tater could not exist.

Please, Ghatt Braines...

Dear Ghatt Braines,

I am a professor here at VSC. I currently hold an executive position for which most men would kill. The problem is that I am dying to accept this position permanently, but I am from California. As you know California has a legacy for being laid back. The question is should I comb my hair, accept this prominent position, and forget my California roots, or should I remain truthful to the heritage of my youth, and act indifferent to this demeaning job as a South Georgia college exec. I have consulted with my wild and crazy ex-roommate from California, and he has led me to believe that I am making the right choice. Please advise me.

Signed,

Steve Martin's Roommate

Dear V.P.,

Get rid of the pipe, take a dip of skoal, buy a four-wheel drive pickup, and accept the position. You need bucks to get by in this world.

Dear Ghatt Braines,

I am a very, very, very important person here at VSC. Recently I offered a position to a fellow professor, who roomed with Steve Martin in college. The only reason I offered him the job was that he had worse hair than I. He then said he didn't want the job permanently. My problem is should I retract my offer and let him go back to teaching logic courses to people from places like Moultrie or should I let him remain and embarrass the school by coming to important meetings with unkempt hair. The future of the school is in your hands.

Signed,
Huge Belly

Dear Huge,

Retract the offer and give the position to Steve Martin.

Dear Ghatt Braines,

I am trying to locate an old roommate of mine. I understand that they've built a college around him in South Georgia. Can you help me.

Signed,
Steve Martin

Dear Steve,

Call Jack Beerstein at 247-3328.

Dear Ghatt Braines,

I am an advice columnist and have run out of ideas, and am having to reuse old material. What should I do?

Signed,
Ann Landers

Dear Ann,

I am an advice columnist and have run out of ideas, and am having to reuse old material. What should I do?

Letters to the Editor

Disgruntled worker spouts off and gets fired

Dear Editor,

I have worked hard at the Spectator at least one night a week till the early hours of the morning. I call this dedication!

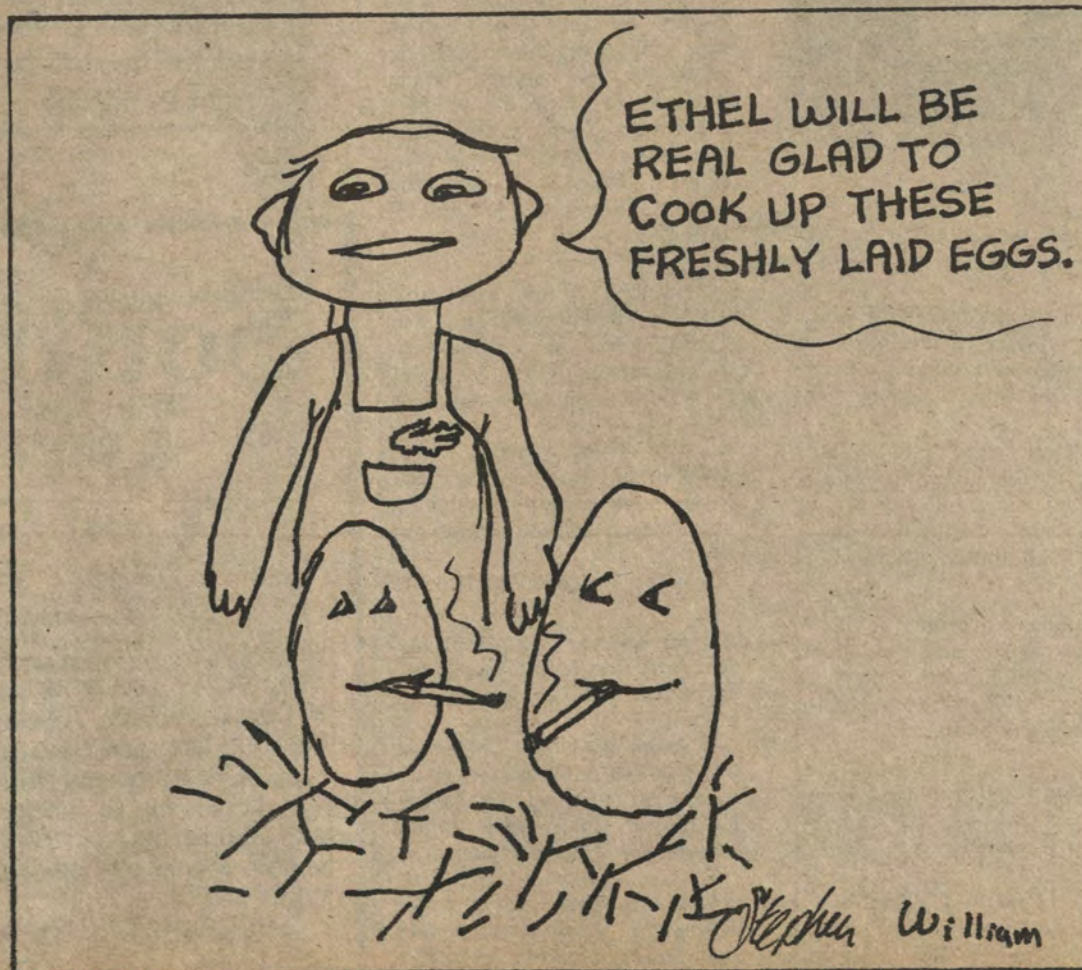

However, my complaint is concerning the fact that professors can take two weeks off to monitor the Falkland crisis but I can't miss one night at the paper without losing a credit.

I realize that professors are of higher educational standing than students but obviously not more intelligence.

Is it true that the longer you attend college the less you retain?

Or can I relate this incident to real life, if I obtain my doctorate I can monitor the Falkland crisis?

Shedding crocodile tears for the Izod

by Agnes Wontdo

While wandering, in a bored stupor, around the Valdosta State campus, I recently saw a sign that read, "Preppie Society, International will meet Monday night in the Camellia Room" on a College Union window. Bored as I was, and that being Monday afternoon, I decided to cancel all my engagements for the evening and attend the meeting. Not being a "preppie" myself, I planned to get in under the pretense of "press." So, armed with legal pad and pencil, I walked to the College Union.

As I entered the Camellia Room, I immediately squinted, I was practically blinded by the mass of color. I observed young men clad in candied apple red and lemon yellow slacks topped with bright plaid blazers and coordinating ties. I was awed at the number of gentlemen with the same initials. It seemed that nearly all of them had monograms of CD or YSL.

The young ladies were generally attired in skirts or sundresses of all the brightest colors, usually imprinted with large fruits, vegetables, or, strangest of all, creatures. There were frogs, giraffes, and even hippopotami. While I was totally engrossed in the observation of this strange breed, the speaker for the evening entered to begin the program. He was a college student of apparently twenty or twenty-one years and, like the others, was wearing chartreuse green slacks and a madras-plaid blazer. His name was Alfred Lamar Van Landingham III, and he explained that his presentation was to deal with new trends and those which were now passe. I slouched lower in my chair in the back corner of the room and pulled my "press" hat a little lower over my eyes. In order to give you the details, I will summarize Vanlandingham's speech with the following points:

A. General Points of Interest

1. The alligator is dead. Some K-Marts even sell Izod Lacoste.

No longer is this considered "in." The Polo shirt has replaced Izod. (Here I crouched to hide the alligator on my chest.)

2. Penny loafers are not to be worn with pennies. This is low-class and demeaning. If gold discs cannot be obtained, dimes will suffice.

B. Points of Interest to Men

1. Bermuda shorts are very popular this year but must be worn with loafers or deck shoes. Tennis shoes and thongs are definitely "out."

2. Athletic socks are the epitome of "low-class" and should be worn under no circumstances. If tennis shoes must be worn for athletic purposes, they must be worn with footies. (Here I uncross my legs to hide my white socks.)

C. Points of Interest to Women

1. All barettes or hair ribbons must be adorned with name or Greek emblem.

2. Plain white shoe laces are not permissible and should immediately be replaced by ones bearing stars, hearts, balloons, etc. (How can I hide these?)

3. A wardrobe of espidrilles is a must for the well-dressed prep-ette, a pair to match every outfit.

The meeting was adjourned with the international prep cheer and I quickly slipped from the room; my otherwise low self-esteem having been totally deflated. As I walked back to my room, however, I felt that I, alone, knew firsthand, the plight of those poor little alligators.

Hailey tracks future of VSC

Despite Federal cutbacks in guaranteed student loans and student scholarships, VSC's enrollment is expected to exceed the 500 mark Fall Quarter, 1982.

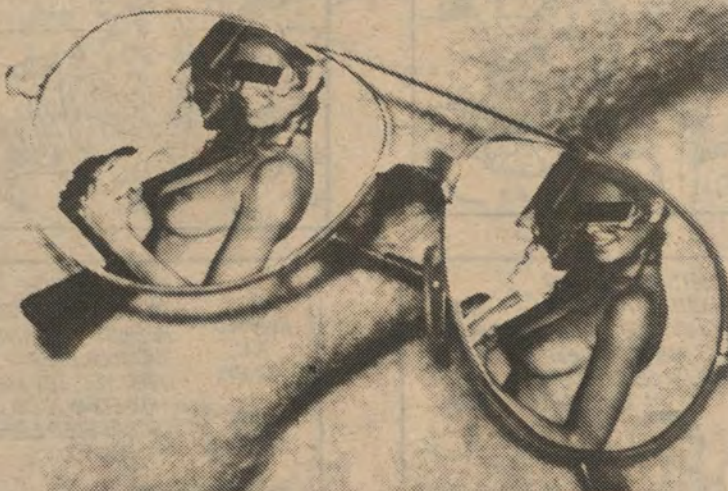

President Hugh Hailey announced that while other schools were facing even more drastic cutbacks in attendance, VSC was lucky to be experiencing "so small a decline."

"Actually," the President said between mouthfuls of fried chicken in the VSC Cafeteria, "we will be able to improve the ratio of teachers per student."

The majority of the remaining students will be on scholarships for football, baseball, basketball, track, and soccer. The remaining 47 students will be on scholarships provided by their rich parents.

Hailey said, "this will allow us to save even more money by dismantling unneeded departments such as English, Theatre, the Arts, Music, Business, and Anthropology. We'll keep the math teachers so that the players will be able to keep their own statistics and argue for higher salaries upon graduation."

A call to the Bored of Regents on whether or these developments would hinder VSC's bid to become the next Georgia University resulted in the following statement. "It all depends on how many games they win next year."

Beau & Pris: columnist and critic in love

by Laura Brotemm

This is a story about two people who found themselves thrown together by fate. Maybe the names will ring a bell...Beauregarde L. Reade, and Priscilla. What an unlikely pair! You may ask how they ever got together, knowing how each despises the other (Priscilla's letters to the editor is breathing proof, and Beau's off-hand remarks about Priscilla-sometimes causing damage to the ears.) And this is where the story begins...

Beau knowing that summer was only two weeks away felt he deserved a break from the Spectator. He had been working long, hard hours on his editorials each week, and worked layout Tuesdays. He really needed some sleep. Maybe he could catch-up on a beer or two. So he went to talk to James, the editor of the Spectator.

Beau said, "James, how 'bout giving me a week or two off?"

"Well, Beau, I was just thinking about you. I got this great offer in the mail. It's a free trip to Fanasty Island. I can't really get off the job and go. What about you, would you like to go?"

"Gah, I don't know. Ain't I just a little too much of a country boy? Ain't there a movie on TV called that?"

"Beau, you would be perfect! Just think of the opportunities! You can have any fantasy fulfilled."

"I don't know. I'd like to have my own beer store, maybe even a night-club like the Knights of Georgia. I really don't 'ever fantasized though."

James shook his head. "Beau, you could go and overcome your shyness, meet a nice girl, become a man."

"Well, 'ell, I might as well give it a try."

Beau boarded the plane. He had packed his clothes, and had a whole case of after-shave. He had remarked to the sales lady, "I want the kind them fraternity boys wear." She had given him something called Polo. He didn't know why it was so great, but if it worked on those sorority girls, it would work on anything. He didn't know what was in store for him.

He heard what he thought was Tatoo in the distance screaming "Tho plane, Tho plane."

As Beau got off the plane, he thought that the island was the same in the movie it was just that the people were different. Charla, the news editor of the Spectator was there in a grass skirt attempting to do some kind of hawaiaian dance. Then he heard someone say, "Smiles, smiles everyone." He looked and saw Bob, the photo editor, and there was Joyce, the managing editor. Could this be Mr. Rork and Tatoo? He was right.

Beau was handed a drink. It nearly knocked him flat. Mr. Rork and Tatoo had to put an ice-pack on his head. When Beau woke up, Mr. Rork told him, "Beau, we thought you being from the south and all that you could handle a good stiff drink. Tatoo, I guess you shouldn't have added so much of that distilled coconut oil."

"I'm sorry, Boss."

Mr. Rork turned toward Beau. "well, Beau are you ready to begin your fantasy."

"How do you know what my fantasy is, I never told you."

"Oh, yes, Mr. Hendricks phoned in and told us."

"Sure, I guess I'm ready as I'll ever be."

Beau was transformed into a news office similar to the show Lou Grant. He expected Lou to walk out of the editor's office any minute. Instead, the most beautiful girl he had ever seen came out. She couldn't be editor. That would be a moral wrong to have such a beautiful girl as an editor. She needed to be a cocktail waitress at a Playboy's club.

"Okay, I want news stories, and I want them now. You! What's your name? Oh, yea, Beau, get to work. Make sure the punctuation and grammar's right. If not, there will be a cut in your pay."

And so, Beau had not a moment's rest. He struggled through English grammar books, English dictionaries, spelling dictionaries and the Habrace for Writers. This could have been worse than the Spectator, but there was that beautiful girl. He didn't even know her name, and he thought he was in love with her. He knew he was in love with her. She was everything. They had so much in common. He was just about to ask her to marry him when Mr. Rork brought him back.

"Hay Rork, what's the big idea?"

"Don't get so upset Beau. It was just time for a commercial break."

"When's the commercial over?"

"It'll be over in a minute."

"But, Boss, I think Mr. Beau wants to go back to his fanasty."

"I'm sorry if I didn't make that very clear Beau, but your fanasty is over."

"What! I worked my butt off for nothing."

"Oh, don't get upset. The girl will be on the plane. As a matter of fact, she goes to VSC too."

"We have so much in common."

On the plane Beau was sitting with his goddess. He turned to her and said, "will you marry me."

She said, "oh, you don't know how happy that has made me. I thought I would never earn my MRS. degree."

"So the answer is yes?"

"Oh, yes, yes, yes."

"I hate so sound stupid or anything, but I don't even know your name."

"Priscilla."

"Priscilla, what a beautiful name."

"Thank you, Beau, I like your name too. It's so forceful."

"Oh no! Oh no! You can't be the Priscilla...OH NO... you are, aren't you! Oh God!"

"Yes, but Beau, we love each other. Why let a few letters stand in our way."

"A few letters nothing! I worked my whole life on those editorials. You destroyed them."

"But, Beau, I love you."

"I love you too, Priscilla. But I'll marry you on one condition."

"Oh, Beau, anything."

"That you never criticize another one of my editorials."

"Never, never."

And so the story ends. Beau, and Priscilla, well, they lived happily for two weeks until another woman came into Beau's life. Edwina, from DAYS OF OUR LIVES, wrote him and told him she hated him. He divorced Priscilla and is currently living with Edwina. Priscilla, well, she is now a social rights activist.

We're still here

by Andy Armageddon

"The world did not explode after all when the planets lined up March 10," Dr. Dennis Marks, Professor of Astronomy at VSC, observed today.

A call to United States President Ronald Wilson Reagan resulted in the following statement, "As far as my advisors and I can determine, the earth is indeed intact. We will, however, pursue our investigation further."

Eyewitnesses in the Valdosta area have confirmed Dr Marks' statement as recently as the time of this writing.

VSC Maintenance work on Brown Hall heating system

McDaniel demonstrates technique on unwary bicyclist behind Hopper Hall.

McDaniel finally keeps campaign promise

SGA Comptroller Boone McDaniel has arrived at a solution for VSC's parking problem. "There'll be no more stupid letters to the editor now!" proclaimed McDaniel from high atop his John Deere 480,000 hog squasher.

"We'll just run over all the cars and trucks on campus and stack them up in one neat pile out behind the Maintenance Building," said McDaniel.

VSC Public Safety Director Jack Beerstein hailed the idea as "one of the most original and brilliant to originate from any student at VSC."

"And," he added, "Public Safety will carry the ball a little farther. Next year, parking permits will go up to $75 per quarter. Then, we'll initiate phase three...all parking permits revoked forever!"

Will "phase three" reduce the cost burden on VSC students?

"No!" declared Beerstein and McDaniels in unison. "Students, will still be required to purchase parking permits. We need the money."

Senate too broke for burgers

Senate President Frank Barter called the May 25 meeting of the SGA to order. Seventeen senators wanted hamburgers with cheese. Fourteen didn't want pickles. One, saying she was on a diet, declined the bun and ordered just a beef patty. Twenty-six also ordered fries.

Senior Senator Jim Didwit announced that the Budget and Allocations Committee was, "too broke to pay for one stupid hamburger. Frank, can we borrow some cash?"

Barter sighed and filled out a petty cash voucher.

Luanne Maddern said that all elections for Winter Quarter 1983 were "still quite a ways off."

Rule Committee Chairman Will Rickiams said that everyone had to play one SGAP Committee Chairlady Sue Mauler said she was tired, ready to go home, and wanted to fly her airplanes.

It was decided that the SGA would purchase mopeds so that folks could rent them to go back and forth from the parking lot.

SGA Executive President

Breylin Crown said that the computer deal with Radio Shack was off. "We're getting a better deal from the Pentagon," Crown said.

Several senators announced they were ready to go.

The meeting was adjourned. There were 38 minutes in this SGA meeting.

Procrastinators club meeting postponed

The VSC Procrastinators Club will not meet for its January 11, 1982 meeting that was postponed from December 3, 1979.

Club President Ike N. Puttitov said the meeting will be rescheduled "whenever we get around to it."

Puttitov said he is not sure how many members the VSCPC has. "We'll get around to counting them all one day," he said.

Anyone wishing to join should think about filling out an application for membership whenever he or she feels like it.

Barbers' kept in business by football team

A new survey performed jointly by Masters and Johnson and the Harris Poll has shown strong evidence that being a football player at VSC can be hazardous to your hair. Seven out of every ten players surveyed reported crew cuts to the severity of baldness. Many of those players had not yet reached the age of 20.

"It's terrible," said quarterback Lucky Berue. "My dad is 61 years old and he isn't even gray around the temples."

Coach Jimmy Goodfeller checked all the helmets to see if the problem could be traced to them. "They weren't growing any hair either as far as I could tell," Goodfeller said. "I'm sure that the problem does not stem from going to VSC itself. It's probably just a coincidence of heredity or something. I really like it here at VSC."

Goodfeller went on, "me and my wife looked far and wide for a swell place like VSC. I especially like my unlimited budget. But, money's not important. The important thing is playing the game like you're suppose to."

Goodfeller continued seeming by forever, "of course if we give it our all..."

My tape recorder broke down here.

Anyway, the only other common factor that the baldies have in common is a cheap haircutting kit brought by Dedd Staples at a recent bluelight sale at K-Mart. Dedd is trying to become a hair-stylist someday.

Irving Harris said, "whatever the reason, seven out of every ten players are bald."

What does this mean?

"Well," said Harris, "I guess it means that 30 per cent of them still have their hair."

Blazer coach to be fired?

by Anog Mustom Phisel

A source close to VSC athletics reported Monday that Assistant football Coach Dead Staples was about to be fired. Staples, known as the "Voice of the Blazers," reportedly trashed the bottom floor of the old gym following VSC's loss to Wood lawn in tiddly-winks.

Staple supposedly wanted to remodel the place to give the team more room for practice.

When contacted about the incident staples said, "Our team was totally unprepared for the tournament. We left 14 winks on the pond an should have been able to score. As far as trashing the gym, all I did was announce that Hubbard shoots TWO! and the whole place just fell apart. I can't understand it."

Tootlelou wins Miss Honky VSC

The V.S.C. chapter of the Ivory Students League would like to announce that the first Miss Honky VSC Pageant will be held in Whitehead Auditorium sometime this year.

The contest will be decided by three distinguished judges. The first is perennial candidate

J.B. Stoner. He will be joined on the dais by super Grand Imperial Dragon Pooper Bill Wilkerson. The third judge will be anyone the ISL can find that will be seen in public with former two.

League president Coke Kasion said the winner will be treated to an "all expense paid trip to the College Union game rooms dinner in the VSC cafeteria, and a swim afterward in the VSC pool."

Kasion said, "contestants will be judged on charm, beauty, elegance, posture, intelligence, and light reflection."

Klan and NAACP plan a ball

A host of faculty and students have signed up to participate in this year's Second Annual VSC Student/Faculty Mud Wrestling Battle Royal.

Both sides will try to see who can knock the whole other side out of the ring. The winners will get a free supply of mud-cakes. Losers will be thrown to the lions or something like that. Last years' winner, Al

"Killer" Parker (faculty), is expected to see stiff competition from titons such as Joseph Mauler (student), Mart Biller (student), Jack "Knife" Beerstein (faculty), and Mike "The Eclipse" Void.

As a special feature, there will be women's midget Austrailion tag team beer drinking while the Battle Royal is going on.

The match is being advertised on both "Georgia Championship Wrestling" on WTBS and "General Hospital" on ABC. "Nobody cares about CBS, PBS, and NBC anyway," declared VSC Public Relations expert Fluker Stewit. Tickets are on sale at the Comptrollers Office, President Haileys office, the P.E. Office and K-Marts' Women's Clothing Section.

Mud-wrestling is expected to get really dirty this time

There will be a charity softball game this weekend between the Valdosta chapter of the Loyal Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and the Lowndes County N.A.A.C.P.

Proceeds from the game will be donated to the various Swiss Bank accounts of both groups.

The game will be held at 3 a.m. on Saturday morning in a field lit by 38 1972 Volkswagan Superbeetles. The field is eight miles southeast of the McDonalds on I-75 in Valdosta. It will be on a dirt road shielded by pine trees.

A weiner roast will follow the game. Bring your own hot dogs. Admission is $1.50. A good time is guaranteed for all.

Public Safety nabs foot stomper

by Mart Biller

Vsc Public Safety director, Jack Beerstein announced yesterday that the infamous "Foot Stomper" has finally been caught.

Beerstein said that the collar "ended one of the longest and most thorough investigations ever conducted here at VSC. After all, "Beerstein concluded, "most of our officers are only good for writing tickets. This was most of our guys first chance at being involved in real police work that benefited the college."

The "Stomper" was tentively identified as former VSC vice-president Clear Day. Day, who left VSC to become something else at some other college, told this reporter that "he was totally innocent of the charge." He said that he had witnesses to vouch that he was at the Knights of Georgia every time a foot was stomped.

Day went on to say that one of the people he was with was former University of Reade football coach Dense Dooly. Dooly, when reached at his Twin Lakes home would only say that Day has a very good defense and the District Attorney would have to have his offense in full gear in order to win the game.

KKK chapter comes to UGA

In another of its periodic shots at organizing students, a Ku Klux Klan official has promised to try to set up a University of Georgia KKK chapter, and Georgia administrators concede they'd have to let the KKK on campus if it qualified.

Klan leader Ed Fields announced on university radio station WUOG he intended to set up a Klan chapter at Georgia. If Fields does try, acting Student Activities Director Dr. Philip Weast says, "Legal precedents require that they be admitted as a group if they want to."

"I have to register any group that comes into my office if they have among them three full-time students at UG."

Getting students may be hard. College campuses have been infertile ground for Klan organizers over the years.

Klan leader Bill Wilkinson announced a February, 1980 campaign to organize Oklahoma students, but now, two years later, student activities officers at Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Central State say they've seen no evidence of Klan activities there.

Also in the spring of 1980, the Klan sent leaflets extolling "white power" to University of Maryland students with common Anglo-Saxon surnames.

"If it had any impact at all, it was certainly miniscule," says administrator William Kirwin. "I can't imagine they had any success among educated people."

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, which closely monitors the KKK, concurs.

"In all our monitoring of the Klan, I can flatly state that we have not encountered a single Ku Klux Klan klavern on a college campus," says Irwin Sual, the ADL's fact-finding director.

Neither Wilkinson nor Fields could be reached for comment.

Sual says Fields is not the head of the Georgia KKK, as he claimed on the radio show, but recently formed a splinter Klan group.

Fields, he adds, "is best-known as the national secretary of the States Rights Party, a long-established hate group. Ideologically, it's a cross between Nazism and the Klan."

Weast says Fields has not shown up yet to organize on campus, though he expects an off-campus Klan rally to be held shortly.

Fields' broadcast did provoke a response, if largely negative.

"After the first call, which was from a Klan member who wanted to know the date of the next meeting, we had half an hour of uninterrupted opposition to Fields' ideas," recalls Lee Echols, WUOG's program director.

In the days after the broadcast, the campus Black Student Union, Hillel and a gay group formed an anti-Klan Coalition Against Prejudice, Racism and Discrimination (CAPRAD).

"All we can do is give people a clear picture of what they stand for," says CAPRAD and Black Student Union President Marvin Ware.

"Right now, there are no racial problems on this campus," he says. "But with the Klan here, people of all races will start to get nervous. Just by being here, they're going to cause problems."

Budget cuts shatter College students

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)-- The "breakthrough" compromise federal budgets now in the U.S. Senate cut considerably less from student aid programs than President Reagan wanted, but college lobbyists say the impact on students would still be shattering if they passed.

The three new compromises effectively freeze most federal student aid programs -- Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loans, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, State Student Incentive Grants and College Work-Study -- at current funding levels, which themselves represent huge cuts from 1981-1982 levels.

One of the compromises, which was passed by the Senate Budget Committee, would cut funding for Guaranteed Student Loans (GSLs) by $289 million, $819 million, and $1.9 billion over the next three years, while leaving the other programs at 1982 levels.

Another compromise budget, by Sen. Robert Stafford (R-Vt) would freeze all aid programs, including the GSL.

The third, by Sen. Ernest Hollings (D-SC), would allow for 6.9 percent inflation increases for all but the GSL program, which would stay at 1982 levels.

The Senate Budget Committee

proposal, which some believe stands the best chance of passage in the Senate, "represents a 90 percent reduction in cuts" compared to President Reagan's proposed budget, says Jan Lilja, committee analyst.

Like the Reagan budget, the committee proposal has students beginning to pay interest on GSLs immediately, instead of having the government pay it while the student is enrolled, Lilja says.

But the committee would keep the interest rate at nine percent instead of the "market rate" Reagan requested, and would keep the loan origination fee at five percent, instead of Reagan's ten percent.

After the committee passed the compromise, the president announced he would support it.

College lobbyists won't. "A freeze is in effect a cut," asserts Ed Hanley of the U.S. Student Association (USSA).

"A freeze is a cut," echoes Charles Saunders of the American Council on Education (ACE).

"Given the recent losses to inflation, how can students deal with a freeze along with service cuts in the GSL?" asks Miriam Rosenberg, head of the Coalition of Independent College and University Students.

The Senate compromise, she says, "is total blindness to the needs of students."

All three lobbyists are worried that the Senate proposal--or any tampering with the in-school interest subsidies--would wreck the GSL program.

"Lenders (under the GSL program) have depended on the in-school interest subsidy as a way of keeping costs down, and making a reasonable profit," Rosenberg explains. "Without it, lenders will have an increased cost because of administrative problems and the obligation to collect interest due immediately."

In separate interviews, both Saunders and Hanley agreed. Hanley warned "you may find that banks are unwilling to make the (GSLs) to anyone without a bank account, a minimum deposit, or a good credit rating."

As for freezing the other aid programs, Saunders says, "We're looking at the same amount of students chasing the same amount of dollars as costs go up."

Hanley contends that "at current inflation rates, a freeze amounts to a 20-30 percent cut over the next three years."

But Hanley adds that freezes are politically popular. "Everything is a freeze in Washington right now."

Rosenberg hopes that, despite the waning of the academic year, students will increase pressure on their representatives to resist the freezes. "Thank heavens it's an election year," she says.

Alpha's celebrate sixth anniversary

The Alphas are celebrating their sixth (6) anniversary on May 31, 1982. A week prior to this day, the Alphas host a week of community and campus activities- full of fun and excitement. Some of the events, namely, the Greek Show, Black and Gold Ball, and Founders' Day Banquet have become traditional and annual events on VSC's campus. Also, all of the events, with the exception of the Black and Gold Ball, are free-of-charge! The Alphas state that there is no admission charged during Alpha Week because this is their way of showing their appreciation of the support given to them from the students and the community of Valdosta throughout the year! The Alpha Week events are scheduled as follows:

Wednesday, May 26-Pool Party-VSC Pool-9 p.m.-12 a.m.; Thurs., May 27-Toga Party-APA House- 10 p.m.- Open House for Greek Men- 9 p.m.; Friday, May 28- Greek Show- 5:30 p.m.- VSC Cafeteria, also Black and Gold Ball- Garden Center- 9 p.m.; Saturday, May 29- Basketball Tournament-VSC Gym- 11 a.m., also Cookout- APA House- 4 p.m.; Sunday, May 30- Founders' Day Banquet- APA House- 12:30 p.m.

Congratulations to Alpha Sweetheart, Ms. Beryl Williams on her crowning as Miss Black VSC 1982 and Best Wishes for the future to Alpha Sweetheart, Ms. Belinda Moore- Miss Black VSC 1981!

Palestinian and pro-Israel students come together

While both Palestinian and pro-Israel students have always had opposing viewpoints, Hussaini believes tensions in their homelands have raised the awareness levels of both groups.

"The number of Palestinian students here, about 2000, has remained the same for the last few years," Hussaini says.

"But increasing attention by the press because of what's happening in the occupied territories has made people more aware of our presence and beliefs."

Indeed, many of the campus conflicts revolve around demonstrations and speeches by the opposing groups. Palestinian students, along with their pro-Israel counterparts, have stepped up efforts to take their views to American students, and in the process clashes between the groups have also increased.

When a Palestinian journalist spoke at Yale, for instance, more than 30 pro-Israel students held a candlelight vigil outside the lecture hall to protest his presence on campus.
