

Taking Life Lightly 1

I have never not taken life too seriously.
But lately I've been looking on the light side.
Take for instance the irony involved in the following ~~new~~ situations:

1. Vera's only foot getting snake bit

2. someone steals man's lawnmower; so

(little story) he has to call a lawn service to mow his grass.
The ~~two~~ ^{two} men show up to mow & then ^{man immediately} recognize his own lawnmower: it had a replacement battery (check)
a non-standard set of wheels (check); the deck on his own lawnmower didn't operate properly (check)
2 men claimed they borrowed the mower from their father.
Police asked father where it came from. Said he bought it, but could recall who from. Mower was taken by police & placed into evidence. Man's grass still is unmowed.

3. another new item man buys pet bull dog
to protect property. Somebody steals the dog.

Woman marries herself - stands in front of mirror & says wedding vows. No one else would have No divorce.
her.
