I. R. C. MEMBERS PRESENT PROGRAM AT CHAPEL

Driskell, Massey, and Johnson Give Reviews of Current Books.

The International Relations Club was in charge of the chapel program Wednesday morning. Rachel Coxwell, president of the club, introduced and explained the club and Harriett Bullard, vice-president, directed the program.

The program consisted of three book reviews: "International Organizations in Which the United States Participates" by Smeckehier—Clara Louise Driskell; "Peace and the Plain Man", by Angell—Ethlyn Massey; "International Security," by Jessup—Nettie Johnson.

The review of the first book mentioned some of the 28 organizations fully described in which the United States participated—as international prison commission, postal union boundary between U. S. and Mexico bureau of weights and measures and for standardization of same, pan-American union for promotion of economic and political cooperation of North and South America, navigation on high seas between Canada and U. S. and the rest of the world.

In the second review it was brought out that financiers, industrialists, and manufacturers do not seem to be sure that they want peace. No nation will give up armed defense. The public becomes aroused emotionally and propaganda is spread among the people who do not realize the real issues at stake.

In the last review the question "What is National Security" was the topic of review. Miss Johnson pointed out that any country should feel concerned about peace, and that one of the first organizations proposed after the war was that of a court for world peace which the U. S. did not join. One of the most important questions as she pointed out in this connection was the foreign population in our country which is always a menacing force to peace.
